Les prix indiqués sont des prix estimatifs en francs suisses. La vente débute en principe à 80% du prix d'estimation, pour autant qu'il n'y ait pas d'offres plus élevées. Sur le prix d'adjudication une majoration de 15% est prélevée. En cas de paiement tardif, nous calculons un intérêt de retard au cours bancaire. L'adjudication a lieu après le 3e rappel de l'offre la meilleure et oblige l'acheteur à prendre son acquisition. A prix égal, les offres écrites ont la priorité. Chaque participant à la vente s'oblige pour les achats effectués par lui-même. Il ne peut faire valoir avoir agi pour un tiers.

Condizioni di vendita

La partecipazione alla vendita all'asta comporta l'accettazione integrale delle seguenti condizioni. I prezzi indicati rappresentano la stima in franchi svizzeri. Se non sono pervenute offerte più elevate, l'inizio di battuta d'asta corrisponde generalmente all'80% circa dello stesso. Al prezzo di aggiudicazione verrà aggiunto un diritto d'asta del 15%. Per le consegne all'acquirente in territorio svizzero sarà aggiunta al prezzo totale (prezzo di aggiudicazione + diritto d'asta e spese di spedizione) il 7,6% d'IVA. Le monete in oro (AV) non sono soggette al pagamento dell' IVA. L'importo complessivo sarà esigibile alla consegna dei lotti e pagabile in franchi svizzeri. In caso di ritardo nel pagamento sarà applicato l'interesse bancario sull'importo dovuto. L'aggiudicazione avviene dopo la terza chiamata della migliore offerta ed obbliga l'offerente ad accettarla. In caso di parità di offerte, avrà la precedenza quella effettuata per corrispondenza. Ogni partecipante alla vendita all'asta è personalmente responsabile degli acquisti effettuati: pertanto egli non può pretendere di avere agito per conto di terzi.

Gli oggetti offerti in vendita sono garantiti autentici senza limiti di tempo.

L'invio degli oggetti viene di regola effettuato in plico postale raccomandato a spese ed a rischio del destinatario, il quale, se residente all'estero, dovrà assumere a proprio carico ogni eventuale tassa o imposta applicata nel paese di residenza. E' onere dell'acquirente d'informarsi sulle prescrizioni doganali e valutarie del paese d'importazione e la società organizzatrice della vendita all'asta non può essere ritenuta responsabile nel caso in cui esse non vengano rispettate.

In caso di controversia è competente il foro di Zurigo. L'inoltro di un'offerta scritta o verbale implica l'accettazione senza riserve delle presenti condizioni d'asta.

Saranno inoltre applicabili le consuetudini locali sulle vendite all'asta, il testo delle quali è disponibile nelle lingue tedesca, francese e inglese: in caso di divergenze di interpretazione farà fede il testo in lingua tedesca.

Of the highest rarity, only the fourth specimen known. A coin of great fascination and historical interest. Metal somewhat porous, otherwise very fine / good very fine 10'000

Ex A.D.M. collection.
This excessively rare didrachm, known but for a few specimens, totally differs from the Neapolitan coinage we are wont to. It is very unlike the usual type both for the head of Apollo on the obverse and, above all, for the Samnite horseman on the reverse; in fact it is the only Neapolitan didrachm not showing the customary man-headed bull. We humbly dare to propound an original theory that, even though deserving full corroboration, is plausible both from the historical and strictly numismatic point of view. A. Sambon identifies the rider as "the Tarentine horseman", dating the coin 340 BC as a memento of an alliance between Naples and Tarentum. Our theory does not undermine Sambon's one as for the dating, on the contrary it is almost coincident as we propose 345-340 BC; but it differs for the interpretation of the reverse. We attach great importance to the detail of the horseman's headgear, in which we think to recognise the typical Samnite helmet. Based on this evidence we propose the idea that follows. At that time in Naples two political parties were in conflict, one supporting independence and a sympathy for the Samnites and the other Campanian populations in conflict with Roma, and the other in favour of a closer tie with the powerful neighbour. In our opinion, this coin was struck, with its unique and peculiar typology, by the faction for independence which quickly came off worst in the clash for power. Insignificant was the output of the mint because of the very short lapse of time during which this party seemed to have the better in the city. Eventually, considering the political meaning of the coins, these types were promptly withdrawn from circulation. Immediately following this issue is that in the name of Roma struck in the Neapolitan mint by the pro-Roma party, i.e. Cr. 1/1, Cr. 2/1 and Cr. 13/1, which we date 340 BC

Very rare and among the finest specimens known of this desirable issue.

Lightly toned and extremely fine 26'000
Ex UBS sale 56, 15.

Dating from the late sixth century, this nomos shows Phalantus naked, riding a dolphin, expressing a motif destined for popular success in the coins of Taras: the dolphin brings Phalantus safe and sound across the sea (also evidenced by the presence of a pecten in the lower field of the coin), and conveys him to Italy, according to the dictate of the Delphic oracle. We learn from the Periegesis of Greece of Pausania (II cent. A.D.) that statues of Taras, Phalantus, and Phalantus' dolphin (cf. Paus. X 13) were among the votive offerings (anathemata) presented to Delphi by the Tarantines with a fifth of the spoils taken from the Peucetii and the Iapygians. The reverse has the same representation as the obverse, in incuse, using a well-known technique of early coinage that was deployed at many other Southern Italian cities besides Taras

Ex Giessener Munzhandlung sale 52, 1990, 12. A.D.M. collection.

There is a lingering sentimental belief that the initial ΦΙ and Κ, likewise ΚΑΛ and Α(Π)I elsewhere in the period, represent master die-cutters. The hypothesis is bolstered by other ambitious types, probably crafted by the same engraver(s). Regrettably, the letter groups ΦΙ, ΚΑΛ, ΑΠI etc., so often interpreted as artists' signatures, belonged in reality to functionaries of the Italiote League, and are found in some form all over southern Italy during this period of war waged by Alexander of Epirus. We must concur with Jenkins as he produces yet more evidence to destroy the aesthetic theory, "I think all the names are officials"

This issue, following on as it does from the rather dull coins of the early 330s, shares with them certain characteristics, but transforms them. The relief is much higher and the detail finer; the jewellery is carefully observed, the ear-ring becoming of fashionable Syracusan type. Demeter is suddenly stylish. A parallel emission, also of hugely improved style and fabric and from the same hand, N.529, has revealingly as reverse symbol a helmet of simplified Macedonian type and it would be perverse not to see in such an indication notice of the arrival of the Epirote saviour

Rare. A masterpiece of the finest classic art, good very fine 16'000

Ex NAC sale 13, 1998, 222 and A.D.M. collection.

This spectacular tetradrachm of Regium, by the so called "Master of the Apollo of Rhegium", belongs to the fifth group, according to Herzfelder's classification, which can be attributed to the same period of time in which the famous Syracuse series of coins signed by exceptional die-engravers were minted. This was after Syracuse's victory over Athens in 413. Compared with the three most notable coin engravers of ancient times, the Master of the Apollo of Rhegium was considered more severe than Euainetos, more powerful than Herakleidas, and similar to Kimon in his ways. Thanks to him, on three tetradrachms (Herzfelder 72, 75 and 76) we can appreciate the creation of an image of Apollo which is unanimously agreed to be one of the finest in Greek art. The head of the god Archegetes, protector of Chalcidian settlements in Magna Graecia, on the reverse, is depicted with a delicate youthful expression: full faced, crowned with a laurel wreath but, above all, the drawing from the nape of his neck upwards is of incredible grace. The Apollinean symbols (in addition to the laurel, into which Dafne, the god of unhappy love, was transformed) are reinforced by the presence of two olive leaves on the left, which relate to the Aristeon cult in Rhegium (Aristeon was the son of Apollo and the nymph Cirene who invented the olive press and who spread the cultivation of olives). The obverse of the coin features the mask of a heraldic lion within a ring of pearls. It is typical of the coins produced in Rhegium, in that it depicts not the cadaver of an animal with eyes removed, but the face of a living, vital animal which, according to Greek symbolism, is connected to Apollo. This is confirmed by numerous models, statues and coins (see Leontini's and Miletus' coins on which, as in Rhegium, the lion and latterly a figure of Apollo, protector of this city, regularly appeared)

Perhaps during the 290's, but conceivably a decade before, Agathocles of Syracuse was involved in a poorly recorded campaign in Bruttium in which he captured Hipponium and Croton. Rhegium, as an ancient enemy of Syracuse, which had burnt Rhegium nearly two centuries before, should have been involved in some way. Our coin seems closely related to certain issues from Syracuse and Punic Sicily, and moreover depicts the solar deity Apollo and a lion, which, although the emblems of the city since time immemorial, seem singularly appropriate to the typology favoured by the tyrants of the new hellenistic world. These splendid dies could well have been engraved by the master who cut the best dies of the Agathocles Kore coinage and perhaps also those of the vastly rare Ptolemaic-type gold stater of the same ruler

The extensive series of didrachms struck at Acragas early in its coinage history seems relatively uniform until a close study is made, at which point one discovers many interesting varieties. The carapace of the crab – the remarkable feature of the coin offered here – is usually shown with subtle contours. However, some times there are exceptional details in the form of pellets, ridges, major contours and segmentations. Most of these variants fall well within the bounds of natural occurrence, but the present coin, and others like it, clearly are the byproduct of the die engraver's whim. The features of a human face are readily apparent on this crab shell, and though the contours on some crab shells do suggest a human face, the representation of that phenomenon on coinage is an irregular practice within the context of Greek coinage. Barclay Head was among the first scholars to note that in some cases the Acragantine crab shell "resembles a human face." Issues of Himera, Cos, Terina, Croton and other cities that portray crabs on their coinage do not demonstrate this feature. Elsewhere in the Greek world some die engravers created facing heads within the context of other designs: an electrum Hekte of Phocaea shows a mask of Silenus set upon the head of a young male (Bodenstedt 70). Other times this practice took the form of an optical illusion, such as on billon staters of Lesbos, where confronted calf heads create the secondary image of a facing panther head

The artistic impact of this numismatic tour de force is one of arrested action. The young river-god is captured as if having just turned his head toward the viewer after being startled; his hair flows liberally to the sides and over the horns above his forehead; his eyes and his expression suggest a heightened state of mind. Fish are shown as if sprouting from the base of his neck. The reverse scene, recalling the myth of Leda and the swan, in some respects is even more exciting, for it shows a light-hearted and playful scene unfolding before our very eyes. The nymph Camarina devotes her attention to assuring her chiton billows in the wind above her head as she reclines carelessly on the back of her swan, steadyng her position by placing her right hand upon the swan's breast. At this very moment the powerful, yet elegant bird is preparing to take flight or has just landed on the water, as its great wings are sprung into action, waves crest below, and two fish, in response to the alarming state of affairs, are stirred, one propelling itself skyward. The inscription does not interfere with the delicate composition of this complicated design, which required an optimal effort from a renowned engraver.

The importance of this coin – the reverse of which appears on the cover of the standard work on Camarina by Westermark and Jenkins – is difficult to understand: not only is it unique, but it surely represents a height in Sicilian coin artistry of the high Classical period. Four artists signed at Camarina during the period in which this coin was struck, and our dies probably were engraved by Euainetos and/or by Exakestidas. Considering the only other obverse die of this series documented by Westermark and Jenkins bears the signature of Euainetos of Syracuse (EYAI), this obverse die almost certainly was signed. The artist's identification remains a mystery only because the truncation of Hipparis' neck – where Euainetos' signature occurs on the other known die – is obscured by a die break.

Camarina was located near the terminations of the Oanis and Hipparis rivers on the southern coast of Sicily. It may be of some consequence that on both the obverse and the reverse of this coin show two fish; they could represent the two nearby rivers, or, perhaps even more likely, they could symbolize the river and the sea, both of which were important to Camarina. The Hipparis, the larger and more important of these two rivers, issued into the sea less than two miles from Camarina, and the Oanis was closer still. The Hipparis was personified in god-form, and is honored on Camarina's coins. On this issue he is shown nearly full-facing, and on other didrachms of this period he is shown in profile and his name is engraved. A similar river-god portrait, this time depicting Amenanos and engraved by Choirion, occurs on a slightly later drachm of Catana on the east coast of Sicily, and clearly was inspired by this issue of Camarina.

In terms of its composition, the obverse of this Camarina drachm is almost identical to the didrachm described previously – but that is where the similarity ends. The engraver of this obverse die creates a placid image that is very much in line with Kimon's facing-head Arethusa of Syracuse, from which it no doubt was directly inspired. The obverse also bears a striking similarity to a very rare drachm of Syracuse (SNG Lloyd 1397). Unlike the startled, alert features of the river-god Hippinos on the previous didrachm, the countenance of our nymph Camarina is calm, reflective and relaxed; even the turn of her head toward the viewer seems naturally posed rather than reactionary. The reverse is similarly placid, and no less accomplished. The flying Nike is remarkably naturalistic considering its Archaic composition, and just like on the didrachm, its inscription is thoughtfully rendered so as to be bold and evident, but not cumbersome.

This piece is also very rare. The didrachm above is known from two obverse dies and one reverse die; this drachm is known from one obverse die and two reverse dies. There are seemingly fewer than a dozen of each issue known, with Westermark-Jenkins listing only nine of the didrachms and seven of the drachms.

This tetradrachm is signed in tiny letters on the curved parapet of the chariot, by the master engraver Kra... . The charioteer wears a kiton poderes or long tunic, holds the bridle and kentron, and bends over the bar of the chariot. Here the laurel-crowned head of Apollo shows the krobylos or chignon, gathered up behind the nape and affectingly curved: a stylistic mark of this master engraver. A lock falls in "a cluster" from the ear, a composed, serene, olympic expression emanates from the face of the god and in particular from his intense eyes. In front of the silhouette is written the inscription KATANAION

This beautiful tetradrachm is the work of the "Maestro della foglia", dubbed thus for his habit of "signing" his work with a special type of leaf, instead of the usual initials or name: on the left side of the reverse of this coin we find an apion leaf next to the neatly designed head of Apollo, wearing a laurel crown in his hair. Apart from guaranteeing the authenticity (sphragis) of the master engraver, the apion leaf motif (an apion crown was also first prize for winners of the games of Nemea in Argolis), is coherent with the image of Apollo as discoverer of the healing effects of plants, a quality which the god shared with Esculapius, according to the great Pythagoras, as Pliny the Elder informs us (Naturalis Historia XXV, 13). On other coins with greater mythological coherence, the Maestro's signature is represented by a laurel leaf
Cf. Plin., Nat. hist. XII 3: "Some species of trees are particularly protected as each of them is dedicated to one divinity such as the Mediterranean oak to Jupiter, the laurel to Apollo, the olive to Minerva, the myrtle to Venus and the poplar to Hercules"

This coin, of great historical interest, can be dated at 520, some two centuries after the Chalcidese settlement was founded at Naxos in 736 B.C., and fifty years before the city fell under the domination of the Geloan Hippocrates (cf. Herodotus VII 154, 2). This drachm is an exemplary exposition of the archaic style, prominently revealed in the treatment of the pointed beard and, above all, in the great eye of the god Dionysus. The great mass of hair, thinly lined with pearls and bound with an ivy-wreath, creates a contrast with the straight lines of the netted beard. The reverse features a bunch of grapes, with the vine-branch, tendrils and vine-leaves symmetrically placed at the sides. According to myth, Dionysus discovered the possibilities of the vine on reaching adulthood, before Hera drove him mad and made him wander the world. God of wine and inspiration, Dionysus was celebrated in rowdy processions, along with representations of the spirits of earth and fertility

Both his contemporaries and successors regarded Euainetos as the ultimate master. No work of ancient coinage has been copied over a longer period or more frequently than his signed Syracusan decadrachm. Most siculo-punic issues replicate the chariot and team, as well as the head on the obverse. The female head in particular must have made an unusually deep impression on the ancients, appearing not only on gold and electrum Carthaginian issues, but also on many 4th and 3rd century B.C. coins from sites as geographically disparate as Spain and Crete. In the 3rd century B.C., the head even served as the model for the tondo on varnished Greek bowls. From copyists' embellishments of corn-ears and stalks, we can only assume that they interpreted Euainetos' female head as an effigy of Kore-Persephone. Most researchers have nonetheless interpreted the work as representing Arethusa, in which case the corn-ears are out of place, although reeds of similar appearance would have fitted in very well. Such long-lasting impact and exceptional ubiquity is nevertheless understandable only in the context of a much-revered goddess, certainly not a local nymph.

The long and distinguished history of Syracusan independence was threatened in the Hellenistic Age, and it is much to the credit of their king Hieron II that the city did not lose its autonomy much earlier than it did. Hieron II ruled sixty years (275-215 B.C.) – a difficult feat even under the most favorable of circumstances, but he was trapped between two powerful and warlike neighbours, Carthage and Rome. In 263 B.C. he proclaimed his allegiance to Rome, and thereafter, Syracuse prospered as the rest of Sicily was ravaged. However, toward the end of Hieron's 92-year life, Carthage and Rome became embroiled in the Second Punic War and the fate of Syracuse changed. As if signaling the bad times ahead, Hieron's son and intended successor, Gelon, died in 216. When the elderly Hieron died in 215, his throne passed to his 15-year-old grandson Hieronymus, who was tricked into switching his allegiance from Rome to Carthage. His disgraceful 13-month reign ended with his own assassination in 214, which forced the Syracusans to establish the short-lived 'Fifth Republic'. Hypocrates and Epicydes, who got to power, entered into an alliance with Carthage. Roma immediately reacted by sending M. Marcellus to besiege Syracuse. After eight months Syracuse, with the help of the engineering genius of Archimedes, was still proudly resisting; the Romans were compelled to block the city by land and sea. In the meanwhile an army under the command of Himilcone was sent by Carthage to help Syracuse. Himilcone landed near Heraclea Minoa and took over Agrigentum. Hypocrates, with a strong army, came out of Syracuse planning to fight M. Marcellus in the open.

M. Marcellus, although he himself was between two fires, succeeded in eluding a fatal battle and eventually entered in Syracuse because the city has been left unguarded during a public celebration. Only the citadel, under the command of Epicites, remained in the hands of the Syracusan. At the end, however M. Marcellus found himself besieged by the conjoined armies of Hypocrates and Himilcone. Unfortunately an epidemic in the Syracusan and Carthaginian camps took the lives of the two commanders and of thousands of soldiers. Epicides escaped to Agrigentum still in Carthaginian hands. This coin, probably struck during the "power vacuum" while one commander was dead and the other was escaped, is the last issue of the free city of Syracuse. Eventually, during the autumn of 212, the city opened the Achradina gates to M. Marcellus. Although a honourable peace treaty was promised, the city was abandoned to sack and massacre. Archimedes himself was slaughtered much with dishonour of M. Marcellus.

This coin is completely different from all other coins of the fifth Republic. It shows on the obverse a female head with an oak wreath and on the reverse a quadriga without a driver. The type is based upon 16-litrae coins Hieron struck for his wife, Queen Philistis (otherwise virtually unknown), which shows Nike driving a chariot of trotting horses. This particular design reflects the upheaval in Syracuse: the horses go left rather than right, their heads hang sadly low rather than proudly upright, and the chariot is not driven by Nike, as before, but is empty save for a scepter. All three of these elements indicate the power vacuum of those days in the city.

The coin's denomination and weight are based upon the litra system adopted by Hieron. It proved ideal for calculating international exchange as there were conversion points for both the Attic and the Ptolemaic (Phoenician) standards: the Attic drachm was the equivalent of the Syracusan 5-litrae coin, and the Syracusan 16-litrae coin had the same value as a Ptolemaic tetradrachm (Phoenician shekel). Considering Hieron had strong ties with the Ptolemies, this latter concordance is hardly surprising. Indeed, this is made even clearer when one recognizes that the veiled portrait of Hieron's wife Philistis on these 16-litrae coins was modeled on those of the Ptolemaic queens Arsinoe and Berenice.

Designs on the early coinage of Cilicia, much like those of Lycia to the north and Cyprus to the south, often have a spectacular blend of themes drawn from Greek, Persian and native Asiatic cultures. In this regard they hold the same charm as the 4th Century coinage of Samaria. This stater has two compelling designs – the obverse based upon a Greek tradition, and the reverse based upon a local mythology. The obverse depicts the Corinthian nobleman Bellerophon who, with the help of Athena, captured and tamed the winged Pegasus, and was thus able to slay the Chimera in the scene reproduced here. The Chimera was a fire-breathing monster in the form of a lion with the additional heads of a goat on its back and a snake at the end of its tail. This Greek myth had somewhat ‘local’ significance as nearby Lycia was the home of the Chimera, and the beast came to symbolize the volcanic character of the Lycian soil. The reverse depicts the winged god Nergal, holding an axe, and standing between a grain ear and a tree; the Aramaic inscription names the god and specifies Tarsus as the city of issue. Nergal was a fearsome Mesopotamian god associated with death; he reigned in the underworld and was the protector of men against pestilence and war. His name survives not only on coinage, but on Akkadian and Elamite inscriptions, and seemingly also in the names of high-ranking Assyrian officials and a Babylonian king of the early 7th Century B.C., Nergal-ushezib. The small tree shown here may be the ‘sacred tree’ that so often is the focal point of ceremonies depicted on Neo-Assyrian reliefs and seals

Among the towering figures of the late Republic was Gnaeus Pompeius, better known as Pompey 'the Great', who by his mid-20s had already had earned his surname Magnus. Alongside his father Pompeius Strabo and later in alliance with the warlord Sulla, Pompey lived in the eye of the storm that challenged the authority of the Senate. Time and time again Pompey (like his father) defied the Senate's requests to disband his armies. He was a merciless commander, crushing remnants of the Marian party in North Africa, fighting the rebel Sertorius in Spain, crushing the slave-army of Spartacus in Southern Italy, cleansing the eastern Mediterranean of pirates, and delivering the final defeat to Rome's great enemy in Asia, Mithradates VI of Pontus. After his great successes in Asia, Pompey joined Crassus and Julius Caesar to form the First Triumvirate in 60 B.C., which remained intact until 53, when Crassus died in battle against the Parthians. Soon Pompey found himself allied with the Senate against Caesar, which resulted in Caesar crossing the Rubicon in 49, forcing Pompey and his allies to flee to Greece. In the following year their conflict shifted to Greek soil, at Pharsalus, where Pompey was defeated in the famous battle, after which he fled to Egypt and was swiftly murdered.

This rare denarius was struck by Pompey's eldest son, Pompey Junior, presumably at the Spanish mint of Corduba shortly before the Battle of Munda on March 17, 45. At this battle the Pompeians suffered another crushing defeat to Julius Caesar. With the possible exception of civic bronzes of Soli-Pompeipolis in Cilicia, no portrait of Pompey appears on coinage until after his death, thus making the series to which this coin belongs his first securely dateable portrait coins. The reverse is one of four similar types, all excessively rare, that symbolically depict the warm reception the Pompeian remnants received in Spain after fleeing their defeat to Caesar at Thapsus in North Africa. The portrait is of particular interest as it more or less equates Pompey with the famous Macedonian king Alexander, also surnamed 'the Great'. We recognize the upturned gaze, the crest of hair above his forehead as somewhat crude adoptions from the often-marvelous Hellenistic portraits of Alexander. Further to this point, the height of Pompey's career was the final defeat of Mithradates VI, a king who equated himself to Alexander the Great in his own coin portraits. The issuer of the coin, a Pompeian proquaestor M. Minatius Sabinus, is unknown except as signator of this coinage

Perhaps no coin of antiquity is as familiar, or as important, as the 'eid mar' denarius of Brutus: its dagger-flanked liberty cap and explicit inscription are a simple and direct monument of one of the great moments in western history. So remarkable is the type that it elicited commentary from an ancient historian Dio Cassius (XLVII.25). The murder of the dictator Julius Caesar in the Senate House on the Ides of March, 44 B.C., is one of the major turning points in western history. It is impossible to know how history would have changed had Caesar not been murdered on that day, but the prospect certainly taxes ones imagination.

The designs are worth visiting in detail. The reverse testifies to the murder of Caesar by naming the date, by showing daggers as the instruments of delivery, and by showcasing the pileus, or freedman's cap, as the fruit of the assassins' undertaking. Though dozens of men were involved in the plot against Caesar, all are represented by only two daggers – a clear allusion to Brutus and Cassius as leaders of the coup and, subsequently, of the armed opposition to Antony and Octavian. Caesar was a populist, and an opportunist, bent upon dismantling the traditional arrangement of senatorial authority, which was based on the concentration of power within the hands of the ancient and elite families. In the minds of Brutus and his fellow conspirators, this was a struggle to maintain their traditional hold on power, and with that aim they struck down Caesar. This class struggle was couched in the terms of the ancient form of Republican government, and of Rome's hatred for kings and autocrats; thus it comes as no surprise that the two daggers – indeed the two leaders Brutus and Cassius – follow the twin-symmetry of the two consuls, and even of Castor and Pollux, the mythical saviors of Rome. The portrait is also of great interest and importance. The only securely identifiable portraits of Brutus occur on coins naming him imperator: the 'eid mar' denarii of Plaetorius Cestianus and the aurei of Servilius Casca and Pedanius Costa. Indeed, all other portraits on coins or other media are identified based up on these three issues, inscribed BRVTVS IMP on the aurei, and BRVT IMP on the denarii. Careful study has been made of the 'eid mar' series from the numismatic perspective by H. A. Cahn, and from the art-historical view by S. Nodelman. The latter has convincingly divided Brutus' inscribed coin portraits into three main categories: a 'baroque' style portrait on the aurei of his co-conspirator Casca, a 'neoclassical' style on the aurei of his legatus Costa, and a 'realistic' style on the 'eid mar' denarii of Cestianus. Nodelman describes the 'eid mar' portraits as "the soberest and most precise" of all. Further, he divides the 'eid mar' portraits into two distinct categories – 'plastic' and 'linear' – and suggests both were derived from the same sculptural prototype. The portrait on this particular coin belongs to Nodelman's 'plastic' group, as it perfectly exemplifies the "stability and simplicity of shape" that characterize this category.

This coin shows the iconography of the famous saga of the Sicilian brothers (in later sources referred to as Anphinomus and Anapias). In the most ancient version of this legend written by the Greek orator Lycurgus (In Leocr. 95 s.) there is actually no mention of names, and moreover there is but one pius hero, a fact which does not correlate with the classification eusebon choron (alms-place), as the spot where this event took place came to be known. The same event was also the inspiration for the final excursus of the pseudo-Virgilian poem "Aetna". Lycurgus retells the story thus: "It is said that in Sicily a river of fire erupted forth from Etna flowing throughout the area and towards one nearby city in particular; everyone tried to flee in an attempt to save themselves, but one young man, on seeing that his elderly father was unable to run from the torrent of lava, which had almost reached him, lifted the old man up onto his shoulders and carried him away. Weighed down by his burden, I think, the lava flow caught up with him too. Here, one can observe the benevolence of the gods towards virtuous men: the story says that the fire encircled the area and that they alone were saved. As a result, the place was dubbed 'seat of the pious', a name it still retains. The others who, in their haste to flee, abandoned their parents, all met a painful death."

As Rome's first emperor, Augustus bridged the gap between Republic and Empire, from imperium to auctoritas. In terms of coinage, he initially retained two numismatic relics of the Republic: collegium of moneyers and the substantial issuance of non-Imperial portrait types. This aureus, issued in about 19 B.C., retains both of those Republican qualities, for the emperor's portrait is absent and the moneyer's name is prominent. This aureus names P. Petronius Turpilianus, clearly the dominant member of Augustus' earliest collegium of moneyers to sign coins at Rome as about half of the more than forty issues of the collegium bear his name. Turpilianus struck aurei and denarii with obverses bearing the heads of Augustus, the Liber (Bacchus) and Feronia, a goddess worshipped by the Sabines and the Etrurians, and considered by the Greeks to be the goddess of flowers and of emancipation from slavery. The reverse type of AVGVSTO OB C S within an oak wreath harkens back to his being awarded the title Augustus by the senate in 27 B.C., and to the privilege he enjoyed of decorating his doorposts with an oak wreath and laurel branches. This was a highly important distinction to Augustus, who was never shy about promoting his various honors, for he maintained the official line that his powers were derived through his influence, authority and prestige (auctoritas).

Nearing the end of his life, the great Augustus must have felt betrayed by the gods, as all six of his potential heirs had expired or proved incapable of succeeding him. Though his only remaining grandson, Agrippa Postumus, theoretically could have been recalled from exile, it did not happen, and the great Augustus was succeeded by his dour stepson Tiberius. This aureus, struck in the last months of Augustus' life, seems a clear indication that Rome's first emperor had conceded – however reluctantly – to Tiberius' succession. The obverse bears the portrait of Augustus, just as one would expect, but the reverse is dedicated entirely to Tiberius, who is shown in a four-horse chariot celebrating the 15th renewal of his tribunician power. Never terribly imaginative with his precious metal coinage, Tiberius retained this quadriga scene as his aureus and denarius reverse type for the first three years of his reign. When he eventually replaced the quadriga type, he did so with another late Augustan type depicting his mother Livia in the guise of Pax.

This denarius and the preceding aureus testify to the definitive adoption and the ensuing appointment of Tiberius as Augustus' heir. It is worth mentioning how the minting of this extremely rare issue occurred so shortly before the death of the emperor, about whose demise various leading inferences have been made. We indeed know from sources that Augustus retired to Nola and, suspicious of his entourage, would eat only figs from his gardens. All the same, this cautious diet did not save him from a possible death by poisoning. Some have suggested the involvement of Livia, a powerful and controversial personality who may have been the shadowy orchestrator behind at least some of the inexplicable deaths of many heirs previously appointed by Augustus. The first to succumb to a sudden and questionable disease, in 23 BC, was his nephew Marcellus, son of the emperor's sister Octavia and most loved potential heir. Next in line for succession was now Agrippa, but he also was not to outlive the Emperor, for an untimely albeit natural death took him in 12 BC. Then it was the turn of Agrippa's son Lucius Caesar, who died of a suspicious illness in Gaul in 2 AD, his brother Gaius having died two years previously of a too fatal wound while at war in the East. Agrippa Postumus, younger brother of Gaius and Lucius, thus became the last male descendent of the Emperor who, if the truth be told, despised him for his intractability and madness, to the point of promoting a "senatus consultu" to have him transferred to an island, in perpetual isolation and surrounded by a body of soldiers (Suet., Augusti Vita, 65). But after Augustus' death the position of Agrippa, next of blood, as legitimate heir - madness notwithstanding - could not be challenged and so he was immediately disposed of by one of his guardians. Tiberius' path to the throne was finally clear.

The aurei and denarii of Tiberius with the ‘Pax seated’ reverse are among the most familiar coins of antiquity, at the very least because the denarius is usually described as the ‘Tribute Penny’ of the Bible. The type was one of three used by Augustus in the final year of his life, 13–14, and was adopted by Tiberius, who struck it as the principal type of his reign. The figure on the reverse – a seated female holding a sceptre and branch – certainly must be Pax if it is meant to represent a deity or personification, as her attributes meet that requirement perfectly. More importantly: does ‘Pax’ represent Livia? For the answer we might look at later coinage that might have been designed with an eye to the past. Galba provides ideal evidence, as he honoured his old friend and patroness Livia (then diva) to help legitimise his own principate. The fact that Galba struck aurei and denarii with the deified Livia standing and the accompanying inscription DIVA AVGVSTA is enough to establish the connection. However, to learn more about the seated ‘Pax’ type of Augustus and Tiberius, we must look to Galba’s sestertii. There we find a type with an identical seated ‘Pax’ with the inscription AVGVSTA in the exergue. Kraay (Aes Coinage of Galba, NNM 133, p. 58) rightly showed no hesitation in identifying the seated figure as Livia – not even as Pax-Livia. The combination of Galba’s explicitly labeled aurei and denarii, and his remarkable sestertius, must lead us to conclude that the ‘Pax’ on the coins of Augustus and Tiberius represented Livia, as these coins still would have been current – even common – during Galba’s reign, and he no doubt chose to depict Livia in the ‘seated Pax’ format because it would have been instantly understood by the public.

This aureus was struck by the emperor Claudius in honour of a deceased parent – in this case his mother, Antonia. Neither of Claudius' parents had been honoured with coinage during the previous three regimes, so the task was left to their afflicted 50-year-old son, whom no one could have predicted would one day be emperor. Antonia, even more so than Livia, was the model of a Roman noblewoman. Her parents Marc Antony and Octavia (Augustus' sister) represented both sides of the civil war that ended at the Battle of Actium in 31 B.C., and from her father, who died shortly after Actium, she inherited an economic empire in the east. Throughout her life Antonia managed her considerable business, political and domestic responsibilities with skill and personal flair. While in her late teens Antonia married Livia's youngest son Nero Claudius Drusus, with whom she seems to have been ideally matched. Together they had three children, with the youngest (the future emperor Claudius) being born in the summer of 10 B.C. on the same day her husband dedicated the Altar of Lugdunum to Augustus. To Antonia at that time, life must have seemed unimprovable. However, the remainder of her life would be a string of sore disappointments. In 9 B.C. her husband died tragically (and she refused ever to remarry), her youngest son Claudius developed severe physical disabilities, her promising son Germanicus was murdered in A.D. 19, and her only daughter, Livilla, was forcibly starved to death (by Antonia herself) after it was exposed that she had poisoned her husband. Antonia's grandchildren fared no better: the three girls were terribly disturbed and unfortunate, her two eldest grandsons were executed after being branded public enemies, and the behaviour of her youngest grandson, Caligula, was so objectionable that many historians believe Antonia took her own life in 37 because she could not face the prospect of living in the reign of Caligula. The reverse of this aureus features Antonia in the guise of Constantia, the personification of courage and perseverance, both qualities for which she was renowned.

The accession of Claudius might best described as an unplanned coup, for he was swept into office by a praetorian guard that believed he was an ideal replacement for Caligula. Just as it had insulated him from harm for the previous five decades, his physical disabilities and reputation for mental ineptness worked in his favour under these dire circumstances. For Claudius this must have been an alarming moment, for he just as easily could have been executed on account of his blood relation and close association with Caligula. Instead, he was hailed emperor by the praetorian guardsmen, who made certain the senate supported their decision. As a result, Claudius dedicated some of his early coinages to the praetorian guardsmen to whom he owed his principate. Previously, Caligula had acted similarly by striking a brass sestertius depicting himself addressing the praetorians. This particular aureus depicts Claudius standing safely within the praetorian camp, the walls of which are inscribed IMPER RECEPT. A companion issue in gold shows Claudius clasping hands with a praetorian (presumably the praetorian prefect).

Julia Agrippina, dubbed Minor to distinguish her from her mother, Agrippina Maior, was born in 15 AD in a village in Germany, in the area of Ubii, where her father Germanicus, nephew of emperor Tiberius, was stationed as a military commander. In 28 AD, before her fourteenth birthday, she was given in marriage to Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus, of rich lineage and about thirty years older than she.

The year 37 marked an eventful period in Agrippina's life; her brother Caligula became emperor and she gave birth to Nero. Along with her sister Julia (the other sister Drusilla died in 38 AD), she was involved in a conspiracy led by Aemilius Lepidus (Drusilla's husband), as a result of which she was exiled to the Pontine islands (cf. Dio. Cass. LIX 22, 8).

Just a year later, after the assassination of Caligula, and her uncle Clodius' succession to the throne, the ambitious Agrippina succeeded in ingratiating herself with the new emperor, so that when the empress consort Valeria Messalina was charged with conspiracy in 48, the "new flame" was ready to take her place and open the way to the throne for her son Lucius Domitius, the future Nero.

In 49 AD, as Cassius Dionis irrefutably claims (LX 33, 2), Agrippina Minor was granted the use of the carpentum, a prerogative which had been awarded to Messalina in 43 AD (Cass. Dio. LX 22, 3). Agrippina rapidly became a second Messalina, the more so as she obtained from the Senate the right to use the carpentum at festivals, as well as other honours. The title AVG(VSTA) which appears on our sestertius (part of a very rare series which were minted as gifts for soldiers in the Balkans) which dates back to 50 AD (Cass. Dio. LX 33, 2) serves as a valuable terminus post quem in terms of coin dating. In Tacitus (Annales XII 42, 2) we find the same information as in Cassius Dionis, with the exception that Agrippina gives herself the honour of the carpentum before the subordinated Claudius. "Agrippina elevated herself to a prestigious position, travelling to the Capitol in a ceremonial carpentum, an honour which in ancient times was granted only to priests and images of gods". The roots of this honour go back to 396 BC, the year of the conquest of Veio. In recognition of their acts of generosity, Roman women who had donated their jewellery in fulfillment of a promise to gather gold as an offering to Apollo in exchange for his aid were granted the privilege of travelling by quadriga (plilentum) and chariot (iunctum vehiculum) to religious games and by chariot (carpentum) on other days. Following the Lex Oppia, presented by the plebeian tribune Caius Oppius in 215 BC, the use of the two-horse chariot (iunctum vehiculum) was strictly limited to occasions of public religious ceremony. Their use was reintroduced after the law was repealed in 195 BC. It is interesting to remember at this point that, during the Julio / Claudian dynasty, the emperor Caligula, as numismatic documentation testifies, granted his mother the posthumous honour of the carpentum (circenses carpentumque quo in pompa traduceretur) to prove his filial piety, as had Claudius to honour his deceased mother, Antonia Minor, Caligula's grandmother (Suet., Vita Claudii 11).

An acknowledged rarity among Julio-Claudian bronzes, this sestertius was struck for Nero after his adoption by Claudius. All of Nero's pre-accession coins feature Nero's bare-headed bust on the obverse, and either an inscribed shield or a display of priestly implements on the reverse. These reverse designs and their inscriptions refer to Nero's introduction into the high priesthoods and his promotion by Claudius as princeps iuuentutis and consul designate. Since Claudius struck Imperial aurei and denarii, cistophori, sestertii and asses for Nero, but only Imperial sestertii for Britannicus, few at the time could have doubted that Claudius favored his adopted son Nero over his natural son Britannicus. This state of affairs has always perplexed historians, as the reasons for Claudius' decision are unknown.

Pre-accession coins were struck for Nero at no fewer than a dozen provincial mints and at what appears to be three Imperial mints: Rome/Lugdunum for aurei and denarii, Ephesus or another Asiatic mint for cistophori, and a Thracian mint for sestertii and asses. Though opinion on complicated matters such as these is ever-evolving, we should presume this sestertius was struck at an Imperial branch mint in the Balkans, and that it is linked with two other rare and important bronzes: sestertii of Nero's mother Agrippina Junior and of Claudius' natural son Britannicus. Though the latter has been attributed in RIC and BMC to Titus' restoration bronzes, it seems better to associate them with the Balkan sestertii of Agrippina and Nero. Recent scholarly opinion is generally supportive of this because of the similar style and fabric of the three issues, their find-spots, and the greater historical probability of Britannicus' sestertii being Claudian rather than Flavian.

As an inland city of more than one million people during the reign of Nero, Rome relied heavily upon its Tyrrhenian Sea port at Ostia. Antioch, the great metropolis in Syria, was similarly positioned, as it was about the same distance (c. 15 miles) from its Mediterranean port at Seleucia. Though essential to major inland cities, ports and harbors were perhaps the most challenging of all engineering projects, and they were very costly to build and to maintain. It comes as no surprise that when great ports were completed, it was cause for celebration. To Romans, such occasions not only affirmed their international renown as engineers, but also represented a new opportunity to reap benefits in transportation, trade, grain supplies and military applications. The construction of a port at Ostia had been considered by both Julius Caesar and Augustus, but the projected expenses were so daunting that it was not until Claudius came to power that construction began; finally, it was finished during the reign of his adoptive son Nero. There are several variants of this famous reverse type, all of which show the harbor from a bird's eye view, but which vary in the type and positioning of the vessels, which number from seven to twelve. Some fixed features are the breakwater and warehouses that form the perimeter, the Imperial statue at the top, the ocean-god Neptune holding a rudder and reclining on a dolphin at the bottom, and the inscription AVGVSTI POR OST SC. As successful as the harbor proved to be, it was not infallible. Tacitus reports that in 62 a storm sank 200 vessels that were anchored within the harbor, and by the reign of Trajan the harbor had to be greatly expanded. The depiction on this particular coin shows eight vessels, ranging from large commercial ships to a small transport vessel

Among the most popular of all Roman reverse types are ‘platform scenes’ in which the emperor, Liberalitas, or a multitude of people and deities, address citizens or soldiers. Adlocutio issues – platform scenes where the emperor addresses the army – first occurred on Roman coins under Caligula, and were struck by Nero and subsequent emperors, such as Galba (see his adlocutio sestertius in this sale). Donation scenes such as this, in which the emperor and/or Liberalitas makes distributions to citizens, first occur under Nero. He struck sestertii with two distinctly different scenes, each being congiarium scenes in which a distribution is made to the public. Later, the donativum, in which gifts were made to the army, become popular. In the mid-2nd Century the donative scenes are identified as Liberalitas types rather than congiarium types. The precise event (or events) at which Nero made his donations are not securely known, though the first presumably occurred in 57. Confusion arises from their being numbered I and II, but not being segregated by the two types, by mint, or even by date of striking. Mattingly suggested the distinction I and II may indicate that one donation was of money, and the other of grain. This variant of Nero’s congiarium scene was almost exactly copied by the later emperor Nerva.

Nero was the first of Rome's many emperors to be overthrown by force, and specifically by his own army, whose loyalty had shifted to the Spanish governor Servius Sulpicius Galba. Since Galba was hailed emperor while in the provinces, by an army stationed in the provinces, his revolt was also an important "first" in that an emperor was hailed outside of Rome and without the advance consent of the senate. This scenario would replay itself dozens of times throughout Imperial history. This rare coin exemplifies Galba's brief and violent reign, for it either commemorates his acceptance speech in Carthago Nova, in which he agreed to lead the revolt against Nero, or his address to the Praetorian guardsmen in Rome on the occasion of his 'accession parade' in Rome. Galba's portrait is elderly, stern and militant – quite the opposite of the young, flamboyant and artistic portraits of Nero.

Though it has long been acknowledged that Galba's reign was one of the high points of Roman numismatic art, this coin shows how imaginative and capable the Rome mint engravers could be when given enough latitude to create a masterpiece. The reverse shows various figures and objects at contrasting angles and in varying depths of field. The result is spectacular – as if one is observing an actual congregation. All three dimensions are fully realized and the scene creates the illusion of movement or agitation among those gathered to hear Galba speak. This coin was produced in the seventh and final workshop identified by C. M. Kraay in his 1956 study of Galba's aes, the products of which he described as "...the most dramatic ever to be produced by the mint of Rome." Kraay's opinion was based not only upon the new array of "extremely elaborate" reverse types of this workshop, but also on the imaginative artistry of its engravers. He considered this particular reverse to be "something new on the imperial coinage" because it was a noteworthy departure from the "stiff and formal groupings" of the adlocutio sestertii of Caligula and Nero. Kraay further notes: "Although only four men and a horse are shown below the rostrum, the impression of a larger crowd is effectively conveyed by the same device as was used on the panels of the Arch of Titus – the multiplication of fasces and standards, not all of which are connected to the figures shown."

In the infamous 'year of four emperors' Vitellius was in the right place, at the right time, to be hailed emperor by a resentful army swept up a fever pitch of rebellion. The revolutionary emperor Galba, who overthrew Nero and toppled the Julio-Claudian dynasty, had appointed Vitellius governor of Lower Germany to keep him away from the capital and to fill that potentially explosive position with a man he considered incompetent an unambitious. In retrospect, Galba would have been wiser to appoint a man with the strength and moral conviction to have calmed the mutinous German legions. Instead, Vitellius was swept along with the tide of history, marching with his army on Rome. In the meantime in Rome, Galba was overthrown by his subordinate Otho, who was doomed to a very brief reign. This rare Spanish-mint aureus, struck before Vitellius had assumed the title of Augustus, reflects his earliest propaganda. Here he acknowledges the support of the Spanish army that originally had supported Galba, but which had since switched allegiance to Vitellius. On other of Vitellius' early coins he courts the Praetorian guardsmen (FIDES or CONCORDIA PRAETORIANVM) and all of Rome's armies (FIDES or CONSENSVS EXERCITVVM). After winning an exceptionally bloody victory in Northern Italy against his fellow Romans backing Otho, Vitellius leisurely marched on Rome and occupied the capital until armies loyal to the final contender, Vespasian, caused his overthrow.

Vespasian's greatest triumph was the war in Judaea he waged at the end of Nero's reign. The campaign was difficult and taxing, and though the Roman victory was not complete when Vitellius came to the throne in April 69, neither that nor his great distance from Rome deterred Vespasian from making his bid for power. He entrusted the final leg of the campaign – the siege of Jerusalem – to his eldest son Titus while he joined his ally, the prefect Alexander, in Alexandria, and another of his compatriots, the Syrian governor Mucianus, to lead an army of 20,000 soldiers overland from Syria to Italy. The combination of Vespasian's choke-hold on the Egyptian grain supply and the slowly advancing armies of Mucianus caused panic in Rome. Further complicating matters was a pre-emptive strike against Vitellius led by a rogue Danubian commander named Primus: he overwhelmed Vitellius, whose forces were defeated in Northern Italy. The armies of Primus soon marched on Rome with the massive army of Mucianus only days behind. Vitellius was overthrown and Mucianus was able to establish Vespasian's authority. Mucianus ousted Primus and his legions, and ruled Rome on Vespasian's behalf until he finally arrived in October, 70 – wholly 15 months after he was hailed emperor by his soldiers. Meanwhile, the gruelling siege of Jerusalem had just ended in September, and Titus returned with spoils in unimaginable quantities.

Few of Vespasian's coin types illustrate as profoundly as this ROMA RESVRGES sestertius the task confronting this new emperor upon his arrival in Rome. Vespasian himself takes credit for initiating this task, for he is shown standing, raising from her knees the kneeling figure of Roma accompanied by Virtus. With the benefit of hindsight we can say Vespasian was entirely successful in his restoration of Rome's fortunes, and in keeping the promise he makes on this sestertius. The capital had been ravaged during the civil war; even its inviolable Temple of Jupiter Capitolinus was burned to the ground in the last days of Vitellius' regime. Rebuilding Rome and her empire was no easy task, and Suetonius tells us Vespasian estimated it would cost no less than 400 million aurei. Vespasian attained a reputation for fiscal creativity, for he would collect money in most any way possible. He became equally renowned as his stinginess, but in the end he achieved his objective by raising Rome back to her unquestioned position of dominance in the Mediterranean world. Interestingly, this attractive reverse scene is also paired on some sestertii with the inscription LIBERTAS RESTITVTA. Considering C. M. Kraay, in his 1978 dir study of Vespasian's aes, could locate only one die for each issue, we know both coinages were extremely limited. There is only the slightest variation between the scenes on these two dies, which at first glance seem identical except for the inscriptions, and as such we have every reason to presume the same gifted artist engraved both dies.

As the youngest son of Vespasian, Domitian hardly benefited from his father's fame during his formative years, whereas his older brother, Titus, experienced quite the opposite. In both cases their childhood and adolescences seem to have galvanized their personalities and their perspectives on the world. Titus grew up when his father was greatly favored in the court of Claudius; indeed Titus was a boyhood friend Claudius' son Britannicus and very nearly died from the poison that killed Britannicus. When Vespasian fell out of favor for most of Nero's reign (as he was closely associated with the fallen Narcissus), Domitian was then in his formative years, and his life experience was one of relative poverty and isolation. Then, when Nero recalled Vespasian from obscurity to serve as proconsul in Africa, and later still to lead the war in Judaea, Titus was 27 years old and was able to join his father; Domitian was only 15 years old and remained in Rome. While Vespasian and Titus gained glory in Judaea and Alexandria, Domitian lived dangerously in war-torn Rome. Once again, as Titus benefited, Domitian suffered – this time as a potential target of Galba and Otho, and as a dangerously obvious target of Vitellius. Indeed, in the final days of Vitellius' regime, Domitian narrowly missed death by disguising himself as a devotee of Isis and escaping the burning Temple of Capitoline Jupiter in which his uncle, the prefect of Rome Flavius Sabinus, perished. Even when his father and brother returned to Rome, Domitian was not taken seriously. He received many superficial honors (see Suetonius, Domitian 1-2), but was entrusted with no real responsibility and played a distant second fiddle to his brother. Thus, it is no surprise that Domitian was rumored to have murdered Titus, in whose shadow he had always lived enviously, nor is it any wonder that when Domitian finally assumed supreme power, he ruled in a more extravagant fashion than his father and brother.

Communication had always been a critical element in the maintenance and growth of empires, and all ancient civilizations struggled with its associated problems. Romans were famous as innovators in communication and transportation, and much of their success was predicated on their ingenuity in these regards. Augustus founded the imperial postal system as an eventual replacement for the traditional system of tabellarii, or private messengers. This was a bold manouver, as the public postal system was meant to service the whole empire. However, the bulk of the traffic involved governmental communications, and Augustus did not provide for its full maintenance in the Imperial budget. With the passage of time these matters were not corrected, and generally were made worse.

A regular part of this system was the local requisitioning of vehicles, animals and provisions from the private sector. These frequent impositions were resented by those afflicted, as they obstructed citizens from attending to their own tasks, and in the end those citizens likely were not compensated or were under-compensated for the actual cost of the impositions. The system was administered, variously, by government officials, imperial contractors and local magistrates; abuses were commonplace. Apparently Domitian was especially abusive in this regard, so Nerva freed the people from this burden by assuring that the cost of the government's communication network was assumed by the government. Nerva celebrates his popular reform on this sestertius, which is inscribed VEHICVLATIONE ITALIAE REMISSA. Later in the empire this system, the cursus publicus, became one of the largest governmental institutions of antiquity. On this spectacular sestertius we see the mules and their accoutrements in rare detail. Most interesting, perhaps, is the high-wheeled cart behind the mules with its pole-and-harnesses trapping resting upright. The scene is placid, with the horses grazing and the vehicle out of commission. The decision to depict a rather idyllic scene, as opposed to showing a mule-cart on the move, is a perfect reflection of the inscription, which itself refers to the remission of the burden

Many Roman emperors were fond of architecture, and consequently for striking coins with architectural types, but in this regard we must acknowledge that Trajan was the most prolific of them all. On this aureus we have a depiction of his marvellous forum, represented by the façade of its entrance. It appears as a building of six columns with its central entrance flanked by four distyle shrines, each containing a statue and situated beneath a circular shield. The roof supports an array of statues and statuary groups: in the center is a facing quadriga of six horses; the outermost horses are assisted by standing warriors, and the whole scene is flanked by military trophies and figures of Victory. The forum was dedicated in 112 or 113, the coin types presumably were struck in 115, and the final touches seemingly were completed about two years later. Trajan struck a variety of Imperial coins with architectural reverses, including many with identifiable statues and statuary groups, such as Trajan's equestrian statue and the castellum of the Aqua Traiana. Foremost among his other architectural types are his basilica, the Circus Maximus, the 'Danube bridge,' a hexagonal harbor, a triumphal arch, Trajan's Column, a richly ornamented gateway to Area Capitolina, the temple of Jupiter Victor and an octastyle temple which may be that of Honos, or perhaps the one eventually dedicated by Hadrian to Trajan and Plotina that occupied the end of the forum opposite the entrance depicted on this aureus.

Trajan departed Rome in October, 113, to launch his last great campaign in the east. After rejecting a proposal by a Parthian embassy in Athens, Trajan moved onto Antioch, where he wintered in preparation for the anticipated Armenian campaign of 114. After the successful conclusion of this initial campaign, Trajan once again wintered in Antioch, and in the spring of 115 led his army into northern Mesopotamia and Adiabene; he found success in both places and added the former to the Empire. Trajan's greatest triumph, however, did not come until 116, when he once again left Antioch, initially to revisit Adiabene, and then to march down the Tigris and sack the Parthian capital Ctesiphon. The campaign was an enormous success; the capital was stripped of its legendary wealth and by mid-116 the defeat of Parthia seemed complete. Afterward, Trajan felt sufficiently secure to make a brief excursion to the Persian Gulf. However, he soon realized his gains were ephemeral, and in an effort to preserve some control over the Parthians he installed the pro-Roman king Parthamaspates on the throne, but his puppet-king did not fare well. At the end of Trajan's long and productive life he witnessed the consequences of his decades of expansionism, as revolts erupted in Armenia, Mesopotamia, Cyprus, Egypt, Cyrene, western North Africa and the Empire's northern borders in Europe. Before Trajan could march westward to address some of these uprisings, he died while encamped in Cilicia. His successor, Hadrian, scaled back Trajan's expanded empire to a more manageable size and as a result enjoyed a relatively peaceful reign. This aureus was struck at the height of Trajan's success, and is dated by Hill to early 117. The reverse type is of an ancient and familiar composition, with two dejected captives seated at the base of a trophy composed of arms and armor. In this case the captives are in Parthian attire with bows-in-cases upright at their feet. Beneath is the explicit and unapologetic inscription PARTHIA CAPTA

Though Hadrian's coinage has many interesting and novel reverse types, this aureus ranks among the most charming of all. Unlike most Imperial coin types, this one seems to be quite personal, as it refers to Hercules of Gades, patron of Spain, the province in which the families of Trajan and Hadrian had settled generations before. Though Hadrian's paternal descendants, the Aetii, had settled in Italica, his mother, Domitia Paulina, came from Gades, a wealthy city that certainly was the oldest city in Spain and was thought by many to be the oldest Phoenician settlement in the west. Though the precise meaning of the type is not known, it may mark the dedication of a temple of Hercules of Gades on the banks of the Tiber. Three principal coin types mark this event or personal proclamation: the type illustrated here, another like it but with Hercules accompanied by two nymphs, and a third showing Hercules standing beside the river-god Tiber and a ship prow. This last type bears the supplemental inscription HERC GADIT, which offers conclusive evidence that the series refers specifically to Hercules of Gades. There is considerable variety in the details of the types. The shrine or temple (in flat-roofed Punic style) is shown distyle or tetrastyle, Hercules often is shown holding the apple of the Hesperides; in addition to sometimes being accompanied by two nymphs, Hercules is variously accompanied by a river-god, a ship prow, a fish, the head of Jupiter and the head of another uncertain god, possibly Cronus-Saturnus. The overall impact of these elements is two-fold: Hadrian celebrates his Spanish heritage, and he makes clear his personal patronage to Hercules, just like his adoptive father Trajan. However, as Mattingly suggested, Hadrian's patronage may have been directed to Hercules in his guise as traveler instead of as conqueror, which certainly had been the principal appeal to Trajan

Upon the death of Trajan in 117, power formally transferred to his alleged heir Hadrian, who was then governing Syria. In his new capacity Hadrian wintered in Asia Minor, and early in 118 marched westward to settle affairs along the Danube. He eventually arrived in Rome in July – nearly a year after he had been hailed emperor. Upon entering the Eternal City he bolstered his popularity by making a donative to the people, making grants to the poor children of Italy and by holding a triumph in honor of Trajan. He also canceled debts and burned promissory notes in a general amnesty for tax arrears. This last act is celebrated on this rare and historical sestertius. The reverse shows Hadrian, or a lictor applying a torch to a heap of papers symbolic of the debts being cancelled. This rather elaborate version of this coin type shows three citizens with their arms outstretched in joy and gratitude. These documents (syngrafi) were burned in Trajan's Forum, where Hadrian erected a monument that bore the inscription "the first of all pincipes and the only one who, by remitting nine hundred million sesterces owed to the fiscus, provided security not merely for his present citizens but also for their descendants by this generosity".

The reverse inscription on this sestertius, RELIQUA VETERA HS NOVIES MILL ABOLITA, is of exceptional interest. It quite literally translates to "nine times a hundred thousand sestertii of outstanding debts cancelled". HS is a standard abbreviation for sestertii in Roman inscriptions, and, depending upon how it is referenced, it can refer to a single sestertius, a unit of one thousand sestertii, or a unit of one hundred thousand sestertii. In this case novies is an adverb meaning 'nine times', and thus it applies to the sestertius as a unit of one thousand sestertii. Some have logically suggested that in the context of this inscription the HS would have been an adjective with the thousand, or mille, being understood in terms of empire-wide taxes. If so, it would increase the named figure to 'nine times a hundred thousand units of one thousand sestertii', thus equating it to the figure of 900 million sestertii that is named on the monument inscription. In any case, this is a remarkable instance of the denomination of the sestertius being named on a Roman coin – especially since the coin is of that very denomination. The 19th Century historian S. W. Smith artfully describes this important coin type as "...one of the most remarkable monuments of imperial munificence that can be found within the recording province of numismatic art."

The appearance on coinage of Antinous, a personal companion of the emperor Hadrian, is in itself remarkable: he was not related to the emperor by blood or marriage, and was never an heir-apparent. Indeed, Antinous is honored only after his death and deification, the latter of which sometimes is stated explicitly, and more often is communicated in his description as a 'hero'. In those cases the term 'hero' describes a mortal who, though his virtuous acts, attains immortality. Frequently Antinous was assimilated with various gods, most commonly Apollo, Hermes, Dionysus, Iacchus and Osiris. On the obverse of this piece Antinous is celebrated as a true god – a full divinity – as indicated by the inscription beneath his bust.

Antinous' cult was widespread, and a great many busts were produced: at least 1,500 can be presumably attested, of which at least 115 survive today. His coin issues were also substantial, with more than 30 mints striking them in approximately 150 different issues. Though most of these coins were struck during the reign of Hadrian, concentrating from 134 to 137, it is believed that a few mints struck them as late as the reign of Marcus Aurelius, and that Bithynium, where this piece was struck, perhaps coined them as late as the time of Caracalla

This large and impressive object, appropriately called a 'provincial medallion', was struck at Antinous' birthplace, Bithynium-Claudiopolis, in Bithynia. The reverse shows him looking back over his shoulder as he advances left, toward a tall, reed-like plant; beside him is a grazing bull, and above is a star. The bull has been taken by some as a symbol of Antinous' death, and the star, obviously, as a symbol of his divinity. Though Antinous is usually described as here being in the guise of Hermes, Wroth's view that it is "a representation of Antinous as the divinised herdsman of Bithynium – a place famous for its pastures" is more appealing. He drew particular inspiration for his view from the star above Antinous' head. We should also note that the pedum (lagabolon) Antinous holds, though principally meant to be thrown at hares to kill them, often is described in a more general fashion as a shepherd's staff. The active and elaborate composition of the scene suggests it was copied from a prototype – perhaps a statuary group, but more likely a mosaic or painting, the latter of which are attested to in Bithynium-Claudiopolis

Although Antoninus Pius succeeded Hadrian as emperor of Rome, he truly was third or fourth down the line of preference. Hadrian's first choice as successor was the nobleman Aelius, who was hailed Caesar in 136, but who died unexpectedly after a year in office. Hadrian then determined he would pass the throne to Aelius' son Lucius Verus – then only seven years old – and to the 17-year-old Marcus Aurelius, who was a distant relative and a close companion. In truth the middle-aged Antoninus Pius was merely a surrogate emperor in the eyes of Hadrian, and he remained truthful to his promise to act as guardian for Marcus Aurelius and Lucius Verus. Indeed, he was so faithful to the memory of Hadrian that he earned his surname "Pius" because he fought so diligently to convince the senate's to deify Hadrian. Over the years of his own principate, Antoninus Pius groomed both as his eventual successors, and thus continued the tradition of adoptive succession. He enjoyed a productive and mostly peaceful reign, and unlike Hadrian, who traveled extensively, Antoninus Pius never once left Italy in his twenty-two years on the throne. Unlike the great variety of Hadrian's coinage on which he celebrates his extensive travels, Antoninus' reverse types are localized, and on occasion they reflect the attention he paid to the betterment of Rome and Italy. This aureus is one of his more interesting types, as it bears the portrait of Antoninus Pius on the obverse and that of his eldest heir Marcus Aurelius on the reverse.

Lucilla was the second of six daughters born to the emperor Marcus Aurelius and his wife Faustina II. She was a twin of Titus Aurelius Antoninus, but he died within a year of their birth. When the emperor Antoninus Pius died in 161 and was succeeded by Lucilla's father and his co-heir Lucius Verus, Lucilla was betrothed to Verus in a gesture meant to tie the two emperors along family lines as well as by their collective Imperial duties. However, since she was just twelve years old, the marriage was delayed until 164, when Lucilla was fifteen or sixteen. At that time her prospective husband was in Asia Minor leading a campaign against the Parthians, so she sailed east and he took leave of campaign to marry her at Ephesus. The imperial couple had at least one child, but the fate of it or any others they may have had is unknown. After Verus' unexpected death in 169, Lucilla's personal life worsened. The young woman was next married to an elderly senator and she engaged in frequent infidelities. A decade later Lucilla was involved in the plot to assassinate her only surviving brother Commodus, who had become unstable and despotic as emperor. However, her role was discovered in the plot before it came to fruition, and in 182 or 183 she was banished to Capri where she subsequently was executed.

Few Romans of high station in the government, the army could have felt secure during the reign of Commodus, a man whose cruel autocracy gave rise to plots against him, and whose suspicious mind is said to have invented plots when actual threats were absent. One of the most famous victims of Commodus was his own wife Crispina, the daughter of one of his father's comrades-in-arms. She was said to have been exceptionally beautiful, and was married to Commodus when he was fifteen, and as yet only Caesar. We are told that with the passage of time both husband and wife partook in extramarital affairs – Commodus more openly and extravagantly than Crispina. We need not consider ourselves too judgmental when we describe their marriage as an unmitigated failure. Indeed, it came to an end in 182 when Crispina was banished to the island of Capri and was there strangled to death, presumably on Commodus' orders. The official explanation for Crispina's severe treatment was her adultery, but historians are rightly suspicious that it was her real or imagined complicity with her sister-in-law Lucilla in a failed plot to assassinate Commodus.

A self-made man who rose to prominence through dedication and talent, Pertinax's career was illustrious. His father was a former slave and merchant whose wealth bought Pertinax a good education. Pertinax began his adult life as a teacher, but afterward he embarked on a military career. He rose through the ranks serving in Parthia, Britain and Noricum, subsequently serving as governor of several provinces. In 189 the emperor Commodus appointed him prefect of Rome, and he was still serving in that capacity when Commodus was assassinated on New Year's Eve, 192. Though Pertinax has often been portrayed as an unimpeachable moralist, he was more likely an opportunist who was intimately involved in the plot against Commodus. After his accession, Pertinax may have viewed himself as a benevolent dictator, but the praetorians none the less murdered him after a reign of just eighty-six days.

this short-lived Emperor. Struck in high relief and good extremely fine 120'000

Certainly one of the most remarkable aurei to come to the market in recent years, this coin bears a portrait of incomparable style within the normally crude issues of Niger. His features are engraved in a refreshingly sculptural manner, and even the reverse shows that the engraver paid careful attention to the proportion and overall composition of the design. The inscription IOVI CAP PR VRB identifies the seated Jupiter as none other than the Capitoline Jupiter, and describes him as the ruler, or protector, to the city of Rome. On an issue of his denarii, Niger honors Jupiter as 'ruler of the world' with the inscription IOVI PRAE ORBIS – logical praise for the Capitoline Jupiter, though he is there shown holding an eagle rather than a Victory. On other denarii, dedicated to Jupiter the protector (conservatori), Niger shows Jupiter in the same manner as on this aureus. The specific reference on this aureus to the city of Rome comes as no surprise since Niger was hailed emperor partly in response to a plea from citizens who had gathered in the Circus Maximus during the disgraceful reign of Didius Julianus. Not only is it a natural component of Niger's pro-Roman propaganda, it also seems to represent a personal attack on Septimius Severus, whose rule in the capital city Niger considered unlawful. Here Niger claims that in the absence of lawful government in Rome, it is not Septimius Severus, but rather Jupiter Capitolinus who rules and protects the capital.

Extremely rare and a very interesting reverse. Good very fine 5'000

This reverse type, though dramatic, at first glance seems non-specific. From this we might presume its meaning was sufficiently clear at the time that the mint masters did not see the need to specify its meaning. The Medusa and Medusa-upon-Aegis types occur on precious metal coins of Septimius Severus and Caracalla, all of which perhaps belong to c. 207 since one of them names the 15th renewal of Severus' tribunician power in its reverse inscription. The obverses of all of these issues are comparable, and are contemporary. The meaning of this type seems fairly clear: it is a reference to foresight the two Augusti, Septimius and Caracalla, in their preparation to invade Britain in the following year, 208. Not only does the inscription name their foresight, their providentia, but Medusa was sacred to Minerva, the protectress of heroes who is said to have come forth from the brain of Jupiter fully armed and of mature age. Minerva is said to have worn the Aegis as a protective garment and as a symbol of her bravery, and eventually to have placed the snake-haired head of Medusa upon it. The emperors were fond of this imagery and many adopted it by adorning their cuirass breastplates with the Medusa head. One might consider these Medusa issues as pre-campaign propaganda by which the emperors hoped to assure the people and the army that they had fully investigated the need for, and felt confident in the certainty of success of a war against the Britons. This particular type with the small Medusa head within a large Aegis is the rarest of the variants and seemingly is known only for denarii of Septimius Severus.

The last campaign of the emperor Septimius Severus occurred on the northern border of Britain – far from Rome, and even further from his original home in North Africa; indeed, Severus would die there, at the military headquarters at York in February, 211, just as the emperor Constantius I ‘Chlorus’ would nearly a century later. Accompanying him on the campaign against the Caledonians were Severus’ wife Julia Domna and his two quarrelsome sons, Caracalla and Geta. The campaign perhaps had begun in 207, but was in full swing in 208 and continued until 211. It was led by Septimius and Caracalla, and when Septimius fell ill in the course of events, Caracalla took supreme command. Father and eldest son did not see eye-to-eye on all matters of strategy, and we are told that at one point Caracalla became so incensed he appeared ready to stab his father in the back before the whole of the army. When Septimius died a natural death early in 211, Caracalla made peace with the Caledonians on less-than-favorable terms that required the Romans to withdraw to Hadrian’s Wall, which would serve as the border. Even though it had not been a total success, the British campaign had merited the presence of the Imperial family, and the consequent ‘victory’ was widely celebrated on coinage. Though the reverse types vary, this as, inscribed VICTORIAE BRITANNICAE, is among the most explicit.

In 198 Caracalla had much to celebrate: he turned 20 and he celebrated his 10th anniversary (decennalia) as Augustus. However, during this decade as Augustus Caracalla’s life had been anything but blissful. In 202 he was forced into a hateful marriage with Plautilla, daughter of his father’s scheming prefect Plautianus; he emerged from that debacle by arranging the murder of his father-in-law and the banishment of his wife. In the five years that had passed since this personal liberation, Caracalla’s rivalry with his younger brother Geta had intensified. Their parents Septimius Severus and Julia Domna tried to dampen the hatred between the brothers, but nothing worked. About the time this aureus was struck the brothers were appointed co-consuls for the second time, but instead of benefiting from the chance to work together for the benefit of Rome, nothing was solved. Since none of these well-intended measures were effective, Septimius decided to remove them from their life of luxury in Rome by launching a campaign in Britain that would place his sons at his side in battle. (For a commemorative of this campaign, see the Caracalla as offered in this sale.) He must have believed that distance from the political intrigues of Rome, the exposure to frontier hardships and some combat experience might benefit his quarrelsome sons. However, Septimius perhaps overlooked the most obvious reason for the rivalry – their disproportionate rank. Though only 11 months older than Geta, Caracalla had already been his father’s co-emperor for a decade, whereas Geta had not been hailed Caesar until 198, and had remained at that subordinate rank ever since. One can imagine how an elaborate and beautiful coinage such as this, which shows priestly sacrifices in honor of his older brother’s tenth anniversary as Augustus, would only have salted the wound at the moment when their discord had become fully realized.

Most of the references to current events, or the 'state of the union' on the reverses of Roman coins were factual, or at least optimistically factual. Some times, though, coins were used as tools of disinformation. Two perfect examples in the 3rd Century are the AMMOR MVTVVS clasped-hands issues of Balbinus and Pupienus, and this CONCORDIAE AVGG sestertius depicting Caracalla and Geta clasping hands. In both cases the co-emperors represent their relationship as harmonious, when in reality they intensely disliked and mistrusted each other. In the case of Caracalla and Geta this hatred was so great that Caracalla eventually murdered Geta in the arms of their mother.

This sestertius is exceptional for the issue, being of the finest style and uncommonly well preserved. The spectacular portrait, showing Geta at his most mature, was engraved within months of his murder in December, 211 (not in February, 212, as was traditionally thought, but which has been disproven). The reverse scene is superbly balanced and well modeled. It depicts Caracalla, on the right, shaking hands with Geta, on the left as each are crowned by their patron deity, Hercules and Liber, respectively. The inscription declares the two are in harmonious agreement but in reality they hated each other so much that they were ready to divide the Empire just to keep their distance. The danger in dividing the empire was that civil war would result. At no point before this in Imperial history had the empire been so close to being torn apart without it actually occurring. With the specter of the civil war of 193-197 fresh in the mind of their mother, Julia Domna, she warned her sons: "You may divide the empire, but you cannot divide your mother!" This reverse type is a precursor to the designs common on aurelianiani and post-reform radiates of the 270s, 280s and 290s, and would fit comfortably in the repertoire of propaganda employed by Diocletian and Maximian, except that Liber would have been replaced with Jupiter, the patron of Diocletian

After the defeat of the interloper Macrinus in 218, and the resulting promotion of the young Syrian priest Elagabalus to the office of emperor, the Severan dynasty – factually the ‘Severan-Emesan’ dynasty – was restored, and would endure seventeen years. The two remaining emperors, Elagabalus and Severus Alexander, were sons, respectively, of the sisters Julia Soaemias and Julia Mamaea. Both of these women were daughters of Julia Maesa, the empress consecrated on this rare sestertius. Much commentary has been made on the reigns of Elagabalus and Severus Alexander, and of the control exercised by their mothers and their grandmother. In this respect, the revived Severan-Emesan dynasty was the opposite of the original dynasty, in which the emperors Septimius Severus, Geta and Caracalla directed Imperial policy as Maesa’s sister, Julia Domna, was less influential than one might have expected.

The portrait of Maesa is far from flattering, and does not mask her advanced age. A comparison may be drawn with Tiberius’ SALVS AVGVSTA dupondius of 22/23, on which his mother Livia appears as if in her late twenties or early thirties, though at the time she was about eighty years old. However, it should not surprise us that the age, experience, sobriety and dignity of Maesa is stressed, as it is an intentional foil to the shameful and immature extravagance of her recently murdered grandson Elagabalus. The funeral pyre on the reverse is well preserved, and its ornamentation is worth some commentary. The structure consists of a broad, draped and garlanded base upon which are three incrementally smaller tiers. The two central tiers are comprised of open archways occupied by standing figures; the large, central arch of the first tier contains a couch, or bier, upon which is the body of Maesa, or a representation of it. The two sections of the top tier are draped, flanked by two lighted torches, and are surmounted by a standing figure – perhaps Castor – attending horses.

Without question this is one of the most exceptional bronze medallions to have survived antiquity: not only is its artistry of monumental quality, but it is almost perfectly preserved and is struck on a planchet that is metallic even by medallion standards. This magnificent piece exemplifies Tonybee's opinion that the bronze medallions of Gordian III and his immediate successors "...represent the last flowering of the second-century medalllic tradition."

This piece was struck within months of Gordian's murder early in 244, and the occasion of its issue is the success of his campaign against the Sasanians, in which he scored significant victories over Shapur's army in 243. On this piece the sun-god Sol, representing of the Orient, is shown handing Gordian a globe representing the world, both terrestrial and celestial. On a medallion from the same issue inscribed PAX AETERNA, Sol is shown driving a frontal chariot beside Gordian, who, crowned by Victory, makes sacrifice to Sol before the reclining figures of the Tigris and Euphrates. The date of this medallion is supported not only by its historical context, but also by Gordian's mature and forceful portrait (a far cry from the innocent, boyish portraits of his earlier years), and the obverse inscription, which includes PIVS and FELIX, and thus places it in the last phase of his reign. The propaganda value of this medallion is as clear today as it must have been in 243 and 244. Its tenor is entirely militant – from the armored bust of Gordian on the obverse to his armored figure on the reverse, crowned by Virtus. The soldier, vexillum, three signa and two seated captives round out the composition

Despite his menacing portrait and vicious rise to power, Philip I – the son of a Romanised Arab sheikh – was one of the least effective of Rome's emperors. After the murder of the praetorian prefect Timesitheus and the coup-style murder of Gordian III on the Persian front, Philip stepped into the vacant role of emperor. Instead of capitalising on Gordian's recent military gains against the Sasanians, Philip patched up a hasty and humiliating treaty with Shapur I. We cannot be sure why Philip acted in this manner - either the campaign had begun to turn against the Romans or Philip was more concerned with being confirmed by the Senate than continuing to prosecute the war. Philip proceeded to Rome to gain confirmation from the senate; the timetable for this is quite uncertain, as one inscription may suggest his arrival in July, 244, but the numismatic evidence calls for 245, as that is when his adventus types seem to have been struck. If the latter is correct, we must presume Philip stayed in Asia Minor either to oversee the Persian front or to attend to duties his brother Priscus eventually would assume. Once in Rome there was little time for rest. Philip spent much of 245 to 247 (the period during which this aureus was probably struck) on the Danube repelling invasions by the Carpi, and possibly Germans, but managed to return to Rome for the much-anticipated millennial celebrations held throughout 248. His glory in the capital suffered by several rebellions within the provincial armies. With so many catastrophes in one year, Philip was doomed. In the fall of 249 he was challenged and defeated by Trajan Decius, the commander who recently had restored order in Moesia and Pannonia.

Despite the best efforts of Philip I, the problems that had erupted on the Danube early in his reign continued unresolved. His successor Decius hailed from a provincial family of good standing and had increased his social status by marrying a noble Etruscan lady, Herennia Etruscilla. Before becoming emperor, Decius had gained senatorial status, served as a governor in Spain and Moesia, and had been the city prefect in Rome. In addition to his earlier governorship in Moesia and his return to the Danubian front with a command under Philip I, Decius had been born at Budalia, a small city outside Sirmium, only a few miles from the Danube. Decius could rightly claim to be an Illyrian, for that region traditionally comprised Dalmatia and the two Pannonias. In the time of Decius, Illyria was extremely important as a recruiting ground for soldiers, and the commanders who hailed from the region came to be known as Illyriciani. The reverse of this aureus demonstrates the focus of Decius' brief reign, both in an honorary and an historical sense. In fact it celebrates the spirit (genius) of the embattled Illyrian army, no doubt because so many of these gold pieces ended up in the hands of soldiers in that region.

Yet another of the 'blank pages' of Roman history, Herennia Etruscilla may have enjoyed the privileged upbringing of an Etruscan noblewoman, but the end of her days were anything but pleasant. Even though she held the title Augusta and resided in Rome, she was largely powerless because before he left the capital her husband installed Publius Licinius Valerianus (the future emperor Valerian) in a newly created position that gave him almost unlimited authority in the city of Rome. When the news arrived that her husband and eldest son had been killed in a Gothic ambush, Etruscilla and her youngest son, Hostilian might have expected the worst. However, they not only survived, but were honoured by the new emperor Trebonianus Gallus, who did not hail his own wife Augusta, but rather allowed Etruscilla to retain the title. Numismatic evidence shows that Etruscilla probably retained the title into Gallus' reign, for the output for her and Hostilian is higher at Antioch than that of her slain husband and son.

- 554 Aureus circa 251, AV 3.95 g. C VALENS HOSTIL MES QVINTVS NC Bare-headed and draped bust r. Rev. PRICIPI IVVE – NTVTIS Hostilian, in military attire, standing l., holding standard in r. hand and spear. RIC 181. C 33. Calicò 3316. Extremely rare. Good extremely fine 30'000

Life for Hostilian, the youngest of two sons of Trajan Decius and Herennia Etruscilla, was brief and tragic. His is one of the most difficult reigns for historians to reconstruct due to the poor evidence of the period and the great many changes that occurred in the political scenario. As the youngest son of Trajan Decius, perhaps only just beginning his 'teen' years, Hostilian remained in Rome with his mother when his father and older brother departed for the Danube, never to return. During the course of his father's absence, Hostilian was hailed Caesar. This may have occurred as early as 250 when his brother Herennius Etruscus was still Caesar, or more likely it occurred when his brother was raised to the rank of Augustus after the initial defeat of the Goths in the spring of 250. In either case, when his father and brother died in battle in the summer of 251 Hostilian and his mother were still safely residing in Rome. The new emperor, Trebonianus Gallus, soon journeyed to Rome where he was confirmed by the Senate and honoured Hostilian and his mother by sparing them of harm. The widowed empress seemingly retained her title of Augusta, and young Hostilian was actually raised from Caesar to Augustus, a title he shared with his new 'adoptive father' Gallus. This was no minor act, for Gallus' son Volusian (who apparently was older than Hostilian) was given the junior rank of Caesar. As honourable as Gallus' overture was, it mattered little, for within a few months Hostilian died of the plague that was then ravaging the capital.

Like many gods and goddesses, Diana (Artemis) had numerous guises. One of her most popular was Lucifera, 'the bringer of light'. Diana is here shown advancing with her faithful hound at her feet; her bow and quiver are retired over her shoulder as she leads with her lighted torch. The other way in which Diana was commonly shown as Lucifera was wearing a lunar crescent headdress and holding a torch while driving a chariot drawn by two stags. In this latter case she is closely identified with moon-goddess Luna Lucifera, for Diana's brother Apollo was identified with the sun-god Sol. (Apollo was also honored by Postumus on his coinage.) On other coins Postumus honors Diana in her guise as Reduci – advancing, holding a bow and leading a stag, with an inscription dedicated "to the return of Diana". Postumus was brazen with his depictions of the gods on his coins, as he typically represented them as his protectors or companions. With Hercules – clearly Postumus' favorite god – he does not shy from making bold and direct comparisons between himself and the god, even to the point of assimilating himself with Hercules. Postumus' highly personal associations with the gods suggest he truly sought their assistance in protecting and strengthening his fragile empire.

Probus' predecessor, Aurelian, paid close attention to coinage, and at great risk and expense succeeded in reforming his empire's ailing coinage by increasing purities, weights, and by re-introducing old denominations. Though Probus did not attempt any such reform of the core denominations, he more or less abandoned Aurelian's re-introduced denominations. Probus' coinage reform did not involve purity or weight, but rather design and tenor: Probus introduced the militant bust on a scale that never before had been seen on Roman coinage. Prior to his reign it was unusual to see an armored bust with spear and shield (for an example, see the Gordian III medallion in this sale), and especially to see the emperor wearing a helmet. Here we have the terrifying bust of an emperor ever-prepared to attack or defend on behalf of his empire. The helmet is elaborately decorated and crowned with a laurel wreath; the spear is in the prone position, and the shield is raised in defense. Furthermore, the shield bears the head of Medusa upon the Aegis – an ancient symbol of defense (see the discussion of Septimius Severus 'aegis' denarius earlier in this sale). The impact of this war regalia is amplified by the 'heroic bust' composition, which harkens back to earlier numismatic prototypes. Probus' intention, no doubt, was to demonstrate the strength of his regime and to show the possessor of this beautiful aureus that Rome's future was secured by the strength of his command.

If the obverse was meant to communicate Probus' unquestioned military supremacy, the elegant, noble reverse suggests the same level of confidence in the emperor's legislative authority. Probus is shown in his chariot, holding an eagle-tipped scepter (scipio) and guiding the reins of four horses who move forward in perfect synchronicity – the foremost with its head held high. Here Probus celebrates an unspecified tribunician power, and his third renewal of the consulship. We must presume this coin refers to the third or fourth renewal of his tribunician power, even though it is not designated, as his sequence of honors would accommodate that. Tribunician power designations on the coins of Probus, though unorthodox, is consistent: TR P is paired with COS; TRI P is paired with COS II and COS III; TR P V is paired with COS III; and TR P VI is paired with COS V

The late 3rd Century A.D. was a time of great opportunity for aspiring soldiers, especially those who hailed from Illyria. A series of soldier-emperors, beginning with Claudio II 'Gothicus' in 268 and ending with Julian II of Pannonia in 285, claimed the throne for varying lengths of time. A successful emperor in this period lasted five or six years; usurpers often 'reigned' for only a month or two. One of the more productive emperors of the era was Marcus Aurelius Probus, formerly the commander of Aurelian's armies in the east. But like Aurelian before him, Probus' record of accomplishment was cut short when he was murdered by his soldiers. Filling his boots was Marcus Aurelius Carus, Probus' prefect who was hailed emperor by his own soldiers. Carus' regime differed from those of the previous six legitimate emperors, as he hailed from Gaul rather than Illyria, and he had two grown sons with whom he could share his burden. Carus took immediate advantage of the situation: he left his eldest son Carinus in command of the west as he marched eastward with his younger son Numerian to conduct the Persian campaign originally planned by Probus. En route they defeated the Quadi and Sarmatians, and in 283 they sacked the Sasanian capital Ctesiphon. Their great success came to a grinding halt, however, when Carus was discovered dead. Ancient historians tell us he died from a lightening strike, but modern historians are understandably suspicious, and most consider his death to a murder by his prefect Aper. Coins of this era vary considerably in style from mint to mint, as this coin, struck at Lugdunum in modern France, attests.

When Numerian's father Carus died unexpectedly at the army camp near the bank of the Tigris river, the burden of authority fell upon the 30-year-old Numerian, who had been hailed emperor at the start of their campaign against the Sasanians. Numerian was now in sole command in the east while his older brother, Carinus, had identical authority in the west. Whether he was startled by his father's mysterious death, daunted the burden of supreme authority, or he wisely reacted to a change in military circumstances, Numerian negotiated a treaty with the Sasanian king Varhan II and led the bulk of his army westward. However, before he could make it to Europe to meet his brother, Carinus died – again seemingly a murder committed by Aper. Following Numerian's murder, another commander, Diocles (the future emperor Diocletian), executed Aper and was hailed emperor in Numerian's place. This inevitably placed Diocletian in opposition to the Numerian's brother Carinus in the West. Caught between these rivals was yet a third commander, Julian of Pannonia, the governor of Venetia, who decided to stake his claim. While keeping a wary eye on the approach of Diocletian, Carinus quickly dealt with Julian, whom he defeated early in 285, only to soon be murdered by his own soldiers before he could fight Diocletian. The aureus of Numerian is exceptionally well detailed, and the differences in the artists' execution aside, one can readily compare this portrait to the one of Geta on his sestertius offered earlier in this sale. The reverse type is ideally suited to the times, for the Roman forces were enjoying the fruits of a successful campaign against the Sasanians: Hercules, the personification of virility and strength, is shown within the inscription VIRTVS AVGG, which describes the 'manly excellence' of the emperors. This particular version of Hercules, the 'Farnese Hercules', features an older, weary hero leaning upon his club, which is set upon a rock and is draped with the skin of the Nemean lion

One of the most controversial subjects in Roman numismatics is the denomination systems in the 3rd, 4th and 5th Centuries. Silver coins of high purity disappeared from circulation early in the 3rd Century, and by the middle of that century silver coins were but a dim memory. In about 294 Diocletian reintroduced a high-purity silver coin, the so-called 'argenteus', as part of his naïve attempt to reform the economy with price controls. Though his experiment failed, Diocletian's silver coin was revived three decades later by Constantine the Great at the same weight (96/pound) but with a broader and thinner planchet. Along with his 'siliqua', Constantine introduced a larger, heavier silver piece numismatists call a 'miliarense'; it was struck concurrently at two different standards and many classify it as a ceremonial denomination. When this coin of Magnentius was struck the silver coins of the central empire were siliquae at 96/pound, light miliarenses at 72/pound and heavy miliarenses at 60/pound. Since this coin of Magnentius was struck at 100/pound, it fits comfortably within the range of variation of the siliqua. Its reverse type, optimistically inscribed FELICITAS PERPETVA and depicting a Victory carrying a military trophy and a wreath, is a continuation of a type of Constans and Constantius II struck at Aquileia before the city was taken by Magnentius late in 350 or in 351.

Perhaps the most important secular rivalry in the late Roman and early Byzantine times involved the two main racing factions: the 'Blues' (Veneto) and the 'Greens' (Prasino). This rivalry led to shocking bloodshed on many occasions as supporters of each faction clashed, usually in major cities such as Antioch and Constantinople. Although the factions originated with the chariot races, their influence and rivalries spilled over into mainstream society and affected life beyond the Circus Maximus in Rome and the Hippodrome in Constantinople. These factions actively garnered political favor, secured the best jobs for its members, and even monopolizing industries.

Contorniates are among the most interesting and under-appreciated of all numismatic items, perhaps because their station lies somewhere between coin and antiquity, and perhaps because of the ambiguity of their purpose and circumstance of issue. But these mysteries are the foundation of their charm as relics of Late Antiquity. Many themes are reflected in the designs of contorniates, but one of the most prevalent was chariot racing. On this remarkable piece we observe a charioteer, dressed in riding gear, holding his goad and the reins of a horse; his helmet is shown in the field behind. The reverse depicts that same victorious charioteer holding a laurel wreath, goad and palm branch. The chariot is presented in the usual Late Antique frontal fashion with the horses divided in profile; in this case the victorious horses have palm branches mounted upon their heads. Charioteers were the international sports stars of their day, and some had their names inscribed next to their images on these contorniates. Some of those naming charioteers also have supplemental inscriptions, such as VINCAS and NIKA in reference to victories, and IN VENETO or IN PRASINO as indications of the charioteer's membership in either the 'green' or 'blue' faction

MONEDAS PREVISIGODAS

Como dice Mateu y Llopis, "las leyendas de estas monedas previsigodas es interpretarlas y justificarlas hasta donde es posible". Sobre las pequeñas piezas de oro llamados trientes, que suelen aparecer en Portugal, con tipos y leyendas similares a las acuñaciones bizantinas del emperador Valentimiano III, se han escrito algunos estudios, como el artículo publicado en la "Revue Numismatique" de Paris (tomo X, 1865) por Eduardo Augusto Allen y Enrique Núñez Teixeira, o el titulado "Essai sur le monnayage des Sueves" de Alóis Heiss, del que a continuación transcribimos un párrafo: "Estos trientes no pueden pertenecer a los alanos, a los vándalos ni a los visigodos, por haber desaparecido los primeros antes de Valentimiano III; porque los segundos se marcharon de la península siendo aquel príncipe muy niño; y porque los últimos no es creíble que acuñaran moneda antes de la desaparición del reino de los suevos".

Este triente es atribuido a los suevos; que extendieron sus dominios por tierras de Galicia y Portugal tras entrar en la península en el año 409 junto a los alanos y vándalos. En Portugal, estas monedas reciben el nombre de suevo-lusitanas en el trabajo redactado por el Dr. J. Leite de Vasconcelos, titulado "Gabinete Numismático da Biblioteca Nacional de Lisboa. Moedas de ouro da época germanica" (Coimbra 1902). Por último debemos aconsejar la lectura de la obra de Mario Gomes Marques "A moeda peninsular na idade das trevas" (Sintra 1998), pues en ella encontramos algunas soluciones a las grandes incógnitas que plantea la numismática previsigoda.

A la muerte de Alarico en la batalla de Vouglé del año 507, los capitanes godos trasladaron a Hispania a su único hijo Amalarico. Durante su minoría de edad se nombra regente a su abuelo Teodoro "El Grande" que se convierte así en el verdadero dueño de la situación, pasando el reino visigodo (con las provincias de Narbona y Provenza en las Galias, y Tarragonensis y Cartaginensis en Hispania) a formar parte del reino italiano. Tras el fallecimiento de su abuelo, Amalarico gobierna los Estados que comprenden las provincias anteriormente mencionadas de Hispania, mientras que las que se hallaban al norte del Ródano estarían bajo su primo Atalarico. Con objeto de afianzar la paz con los frances, Amalarico obtuvo la mano de Clotilda, hija del rey Clodoveo y hermana de los cuatro reyes que gobernaban el norte de las Galias. Pero pronto surgieron insalvables discusiones entre ambos cónyuges, pues él profesaba el arrianismo, mientras ella era una ferviente católica. Clotilda cansada de sufrir las imposiciones de su marido, pide ayuda a sus hermanos quienes fueron en su auxilio y derrotaron a Amalarico frente a los muros de Narbona, según unos autores, o de Barcelona, según otros.

Los visigodos no cambiaron el monetario que encontraron establecido en el antiguo imperio romano, pues al carecer de moneda propia imitaron en sus acuñaciones el estilo y el sistema anterior. Dicha imitación finaliza en los últimos años del reinado de Leovigildo. La moneda nacional fue el triente, de oro, tercio del "solidus aureus" romano o bizantino. Pero si bien en el aspecto de la metrología no presenta ningún problema, si en cambio la identificación y localización de las cecas, así como las reglas epigráficas de sus inscripciones, se abren a un mundo de dudas donde el estudioso bucea a tientas, sin haber llegado aún a hechos concretos e irrefutables. Así, los anversos de tales monedas, como la presente, son reproducciones más o menos bien realizadas de los anversos de Justino I, pues en este caso, incluso se encuentra a faltar la cruz que suelen llevar en el drapeado las acuñaciones de Amalarico (ver Mateu página 145, lámina. III.). La diferencia más importante del reverso es la desaparición del globo crucifero, que sostiene la Victoria en las piezas originales de Justino, a favor de la corona de laurel y la palma que vemos en los trientes de Amalarico.

La pieza presente es el exponente clásico, sobre todo en la caligrafía de las leyendas, del arte bárbaro con el que se acuñaba en esta época. A nombre de Justiniano I pudieron amonedar, según Felipe Mateu y Llopis, los reyes Amalarico, Theudis, Theudigiselio, Agila y Athanagildo. Se conocen trientes a nombre de Justiniano I con el monograma de Amalarico en el campo del reverso. En cuanto a los cuatro reyes restantes, que cubrieron un periodo de cuarenta años, se suceden sin aparecer aún la moneda propiamente visigoda y, si durante los monarcas anteriores se realizaron imitaciones, con o sin monograma, de la moneda bizantina, es de suponer que se efectuaran asimismo durante estos cuatro reyes, de los que se desconocen monedas propias. El número de imitaciones a nombre de Justino I es inferior a las de Justiniano I. El modelo creado por el primero continuará con similar pauta en el segundo, pues, si bien se inscribe en las monedas el nombre del nuevo emperador de Oriente, los tipos permanecen idénticos a los diseñados a nombre de Justino I para las imitaciones nacionales. Así, por ejemplo, en el anverso persiste la cruz sobre el drapeado real o imperial del rey, como en el reverso se mantiene la Victoria con corona en su mano derecha y palma sobre el hombro sostenida por su mano izquierda. Otro caso bien distinto es el de las leyendas, pues, si en un principio se intenta copiar las originales, se acaba, por la rutina de los grabadores, sólo colocando alguna de las letras más características, siendo las otras poco menos que ilegibles.

Tomasini en su tratado, "The barbaric tremissis in Spain and Southern France. Anastasius to Leovigild" página 165, dice que estas monedas con leyenda CVRRV, o sus variantes, fueron posiblemente las primeras que acuñó Leovigildo entre los años 560 y 573, cuando ya gobernaba solo, pero antes de que se decidiese a colocar su nombre en el anverso y la ceca en el reverso, creando de ese modo las primeras monedas nacionales, aún dentro de la imitación metrológica y tipológica que éstas suponían, pues no podía romperse bruscamente una tradición que iba del interés material al prestigio político del Imperio. Por otro lado, Heiss nos advierte que Leovigildo empezó a acuñar, con caracteres ilegibles, cuando aún no se atrevía a estampar su nombre pero tampoco el del Emperador. Dado el crédito que gozaba el oro romano recelaba de que sus monedas no fuesen bien recibidas. Solo cuando el comercio fue aceptando las variaciones efectuadas en los cuños, se atrevió a realizar otras modificaciones mas radicales. Este triente estaría en el grupo que comprende el periodo anterior al que Leovigildo se decidió por fin a acuñar monedas con su nombre.

En la historia de la numismática existen épocas donde lo difícil es encontrar una pieza inédita y periodos donde es prácticamente imposible comparar dos monedas similares. Este último caso abarca los trientes previsigodos, pues los cuños se rompián con suma facilidad y la interpretación de las leyendas realizadas por los grabadores eran tan aleatorias, que es difícil observar las monedas bajo unos criterios más o menos estables. A Wallace J. Tomasini le debemos el intento meritorio de redactar un catálogo de los trientes bárbaros, que circularon durante el periodo anterior a la moneda propiamente visigoda. Pero aún así, la dificultad de clasificar una determinada pieza con la obra de Tomasini, no solo viene dado por el gran número de variantes existentes, sino, también, por la interpretación de los signos, que muchas veces suele ser distinta según quien esté catalogando, ya que, por ejemplo, donde nosotros intuimos la letra N, otro puede apreciar IV. El profesor Mateu y Llopis establece cinco apartados en las acuñaciones de Leovigildo. I) Monedas a nombre del emperador de Oriente y de Leovigildo. II) Monedas a nombre de Leovigildo con CONOB en el exergo del reverso. III) Similares a las del último apartado pero con nombre de ceca hispana (Toledo) y del tipo Victoria. IV) Similares a las del último apartado pero en reverso cruz sobre gradas, en lugar de la Victoria. V) Las monedas propiamente visigodas con bustos en anverso y reverso y con nombre de cecas hispanas.

Este triente, como los dos anteriores, pertenece a los comienzos del reinado de Leovigildo. Las primeras imitaciones conocidas de la moneda bizantina en territorio visigodo son las acuñadas a nombre de Anastasio (491 - 518) y no las a nombre de Justino I y Justiniano I como se viene repitiendo. Conviene, pues, repasar las monedas genuinas de aquel emperador para comprender los enigmas representados en las posteriores acuñaciones. Durante aquel reinado aparecieron dos divisores del solidus, el semis y el tremis, la mitad y la tercera parte, respectivamente; siendo sus cecas Constantinopla, Nicomedia y Antioquía. Debemos recordar que durante Anastasio, la ceca del oro de Constantinopla marcaba en el exergo del reverso CONOB, es decir, las tres primeras letras del nombre de la ciudad (CON), más las dos primeras de obryzum (OB) "oro fino". De ahí, el que encontramos estas siglas ó variantes en los trientes previsigodos debido al intercambio y al prestigio de la moneda Imperial, que marcó unas pautas, bien por mimetismo, bien por conveniencia, durante dicho periodo.

Si bien es enorme la variedad existente en los trientes en cuanto a la leyenda y estilo, no lo es, por el contrario, en el tamaño, peso, pureza del metal, y tipo, los cuales guardan unas pautas muy concretas. Leovigildo aspiraba a la unificación de su reino con la conquista de los suevos y la sumisión de los vascones. Pero como la unidad política difícilmente nacería del pueblo conquistador, pues por principio todos los bárbaros personificaban desunión e individualismo, Leovigildo organizó su poder enmarcándolo dentro de la tradición romana, con sus leyes administrativas, que a la larga debía traer la asimilación de las dos razas. En 569 Leovigildo regía la Hispania Citerior desde su capital Toledo. Y aquí acuñó, este rey, por primera vez el nombre de la ciudad en el reverso de las monedas. El presente triente es anterior a dicha efemérides que daría como resultado una moneda propiamente visigoda, elevando a su reino a las características de absoluta soberanía.

La evolución del arte no siempre sigue las pautas pre establecidas, donde lo lógico sería heredar las constantes del periodo anterior, para actualizarlas en el presente y abrir así el camino a las futuras tendencias. Esta evolución, repito, no siempre se da a lo largo de la Historia. A menudo, el pasado, el presente y el futuro dejan de entrelazarse. Si observamos este triente vemos que no arranca del arte grecorromano, pues no es el resultado de la decadencia que sufre todo periodo que ha alcanzado la cúspide. Nada hay en él del ideal helénico que durante siglos imperó en el Mediterráneo. Ni siquiera podríamos afirmar que su arte surge de la evolución barbarizante del sólido, pues parece estar influenciado por las pinturas rupestres de los bosquimanos de Zambia. ¿Cómo y por qué el arte numismático de los pueblos llegados del norte saltó por encima de tantos siglos para zambullirse inconscientemente en la esencia de las primeras manifestaciones artísticas de la humanidad, acaecidas en el sur de África? O mejor aún, ¿qué explicación puede tener que artistas como Paul Klee o Picasso, entre otros pioneros de la Vanguardia del siglo pasado, volvieran de nuevo a actualizar los rasgos y caracteres que observamos en el presente triente, pasando por alto los movimientos anteriores a ellos, como el renacimiento, el modernismo o el impresionismo? Decididamente la moneda es un documento histórico que abre un sinfín de teorías, a veces incomprensibles, a veces sorprendentes.

Es explicable que Leovigildo acuñase por fin monedas a su nombre, pues de hecho fue el fundador de la monarquía visigoda de tipo hispano y definitivo. Fue él quien organizó la corte y el consejo, estableciendo la administración basada en la división del territorio. Dio prestigio a la autoridad y usó, por primera vez, corona y cetro a la manera de los antiguos emperadores romanos y bizantinos. Con posterioridad otorgó el título de Flavio a su hijo Recaredo. Título que demuestra que aquellos a los que se les denominaba bárbaros, lejos de destruir la civilización antigua cimentaron en ella las bases de su nuevo reino. Este triente pertenece al apartado II diseñado por el profesor Felipe Mateu y Llopis, en el que comprende las piezas acuñadas por Leovigildo ya con su nombre pero aún sin indicar la ceca. Todas estas piezas pueden dividirse por su estilo en dos apartados, las acuñadas en la Galia, y las acuñadas en Toledo.

El presente triente tiene todas las características de haber surgido de la ceca de Toledo. El busto es más grande que el de las anteriores monedas, y el pelo se compone de cinco ondas paralelas que nacen de la diadema. En el reverso, se ha llegado a tal simplicidad, que hizo confundir a D. Antonio Agustín al recordarle no una Victoria, sino una langosta, grillo o cigarra.

La provincia visigoda denominada Tarragonensis comprendía las tierras hispanas del noreste de la Península Ibérica, enmarcadas en su parte norte por los Pirineos y en su parte sur por las tierras de Valencia. Los Montes Ibéricos la cerraban por el sudoeste, estrechándola hacia Cantabria a lo largo del Ebro. Era ciudad preeminente su capital, la antigua Colonia Iulia Triumphalis Tarraco, y llamada Tarracón por los visigodos.

Camaraner agrupa las monedas visigodas en ocho estilos según sean sus tipos. Al llamado tercer estilo pertenecían los trientes acuñados en la Tarragonensis y añade que las diferencias sensibles apreciadas en los dibujos no dependen de la época en que se abrieron los cuños, pues existe una gran diversidad durante un mismo reinado. Por el contrario, se advierte una relativa homogeneidad entre las piezas emitidas en una misma ciudad, o incluso en una misma comarca o provincia. Y así, por ejemplo, apreciamos que el ropaje que ostenta el monarca de las piezas procedentes de las cecas Tarragonensis (Cesaraugusta, Tarraco, Turiaso, Dertosa, Gerunda y a veces Narbona) está formado por un ropón cruzado sobre el pecho (paludamentum?) sujeto al hombro izquierdo por una fibula.

El tipo del busto de anverso y reverso es similar al reseñado en Miles página 58 nº 5d. De cabeza tamaño mediano, el ropaje del monarca se compone de cuatro líneas que parten del cuello para abrirse a medida que van descendiendo, unidas por cuatro líneas más o menos paralelas. Este tipo de ropaje también lo apreciamos en las acuñaciones de Tude de Sisebuto. (ver Miles página 59 nº 51i).

La entidad administrativa en los tiempos romanos llamada Carthaginensis seguía denominándose así en la provincia eclesiástica visigoda. La similitud de los trientes acuñados en el sur de la Carthaginensis y de las cecas orientales de la Baetica es notable y mucho más tosco que los acuñados en la Tarragonensis. El tipo es constante en el sur (Acci, Castulona), como en el centro (Toledo) y algo más depurado en el norte (Saldanía). Toledo era, además de sede política y eclesiástica, un centro comercial de primer orden, como lo prueba la cantidad de trientes acuñados en esta ciudad por los reyes desde Leovigildo hasta el último de todos ellos, Roderico. El nombre de Toledo aparece invariablemente completo, ya sea en la leyenda, o en el monograma.

Cuando en el 585 por fin Leovigildo eliminó a los suevos de la zona nortoccidental, quedó la mayor parte de la península en manos de los visigodos, excepto las Baleares y la franja costera, desde el estrecho de Gibraltar hasta Cartagena, que permanecieron bajo el dominio de Bizancio, hasta que Suintila en el 624 los desalojó definitivamente. El único reducto que subsistió siempre en pie de guerra, fue el área de notable extensión Cántabra-Vasca. Solo hay que recordar que mucho tiempo después, en el 711, cuando los árabes invaden la península, el rey visigodo Rodrigo se encontraba en el norte combatiendo infructuosamente contra los vascones.

La variante más importante, que se aprecia en este triente comparado con el anterior, está en la leyenda del reverso, pues la letra P que inicia la palabra PIVS es de hecho una R muy visible. La caligrafía de las letras es distinta, ya que la S de RECCAREDVS es de mayor tamaño y más abierta; la cruz que vemos encima de la cabeza del monarca en anverso, también es más grande. En cuanto al reverso, existe una separación entre la V y la S tumbada en relación al anterior triente. Con referencia al estilo de los bustos, nos encontramos en el anverso de la presente moneda unas líneas distintas y algo más confusas que configuran el ropaje del monarca, similar al dibujo de la izquierda de Miles página 58 nº 5d, con la variante en la que parece apreciarse un punto sobre el hombro izquierdo. Aún más marcada es la diferencia existente en el busto del reverso si lo comparamos con la anterior moneda. De tamaño más reducido, y ropaje totalmente distinto.

Recaredo I se hizo bautizar en secreto por la religión católica, un año después de subir al trono, tras la muerte de su padre Leovigildo. Su reinado sufrió varias conspiraciones arrianas, castigadas con la quema de todos los libros y textos, así como de la exclusión de éstos de cualquier cargo público. El 8 de mayo del 589 se inició el III Concilio de Toledo que anatemizó a Arrio y sus doctrinas y condenó a los nobles visigodos que aún profesaban dicha herejía. Recaredo murió en Toledo en diciembre del año 601.

La Provincia Baetica, como tal división eclesiástica, comprendía las diferentes sedes, que tenían por metropolitana a Ispali, Abdera, Malaca, Asidonia, Elepa, Italica, Córdoba, Tucci, Astigi, Egabro y Eliberri. Su centro económico de importancia capital lo formaban tres ciudades, Ispali en la Andalucía occidental, Córdoba en la Central y Eliberri en la Oriental. Las tres acuñaron casi durante todos los reinados que comprende el periodo visigodo.

Las letras de este triente son anchas y de gran tamaño. El manto del emperador, tanto del anverso como del reverso, se asemeja al dibujado por Miles página 58 nº 5d, derecha.

Si bien existe una gran variedad de estilos en la moneda denominada triente, ofrece, por el contrario, una absoluta uniformidad en cuanto a la metrología. Los visigodos llevaron su sistema a un riguroso y exclusivo monometalismo, el oro y a un peso en lo referente al triente que se ceñía entre los 1,400 grs. y los 1,500 grs. Acerca del sistema monetario, Heiss indica que la libra romana usada en tiempo de los visigodos, era de 12 onzas. El sueldo de oro, "solidus aureus", pesaba la sexta parte de la onza. No existen aureos acuñados por los visigodos; sus únicas monedas son tercios de sueldos, que comenzaron imitando los tremises imperiales con sus tipos, talla y ley. Los visigodos aceptaron el sistema monetario romano - bizantino vigente, y se sirvieron de él sin modificación alguna, hasta que la necesidad les forzó a aumentar el capital circulante, limitándose a acuñar monedas de oro. Aunque no nos consta por datos históricos, que labrasen piezas en plata o bronce, M. Crusafont en su trabajo titulado "El sistema monetario visigodo: cobre y oro", demuestra que, efectivamente, llegaron a emitir monedas de cobre, a pesar de existir en los mercados una gran cantidad procedente de las acuñaciones romanas de todas las épocas.

Aparte de que este triente es de cuño completamente distinto al anterior, la gran variante la encontramos en la leyenda del anverso, donde se invierte por error, el orden de las dos últimas letras que componen el nombre del rey RECAREDVS por RECAREDSV. Estos errores, que detectamos a menudo en la numismática visigoda, se deben en gran parte a la rotura de cuños, junto a la necesidad de fabricar otros lo mas rápidamente posible, para atender la recaudación del impuesto del oro, pues muchas veces dicha recaudación se efectuaba en los propios lugares campesinos, donde se amonedaba con las matrices traídas de las cecas fijas. Hay que distinguir entre cecas matrices y labras móviles. Las primeras provienen de la capital, las segundas son itinerantes y se abren dependiendo de la necesidad comercial y puntual de hechos concretos. No es de extrañar pues, que existan diferencias notables entre trientes pertenecientes a un mismo rey y a una misma ceca.

En el caso del presente triente vemos invertidas las dos palabras que componen la leyenda del reverso con relación a las dos monedas anteriores: ISPALI PIVS por PIVS ISPALI. Ispali (Sevilla), antigua Colonia Romana, añade a su nombre, como tantas otras capitales de Hispania, la palabra latina PIVS, cuya traducción es virtuoso, justo, piadoso, religioso, etc. y en términos generales adquiere el significado de: el que cumple sus deberes para con los dioses, la familia, la patria. De ahí que diversos emperadores romanos, como Antonino Pio (PIVS), agregasen este adjetivo a su nombre. Excepto las cecas de Acci, Cestavia, Egabro, Flavas, Rodas, Sagunto, las otras unen, si no siempre, sí en períodos determinados, el adjetivo Pius al topónimo de la ciudad.

Variante de los anteriores por faltarle la X de REX (final de leyenda en anverso). La palabra latina REX se traduce por, soberano, monarca, etc. y suele ir después del nombre del rey en los trientes visigodos. Tradición que continuará posteriormente en la época medieval y mas adelante en las Casas Reales de los Austrias y de los Borbones. Viene a suplir el término AUGVSTVS que utilizaban los romanos, sinónimo de emperador y que por regla general solían colocar al final de la leyenda del anverso con su abreviación AVG.

Interesante moneda donde el estilo del busto de ambas caras es totalmente diferente. El del anverso es similar al dibujado en Miles página 62 nº 8c y el del reverso al Miles página 61 nº 7. El drapeado del anverso está formado por una media circunferencia, cortada por una linea horizontal, que forman los hombros del monarca y una linea vertical que divide dicha media circunferencia con un punto en ambos espacios. Por el contrario, el ropaje del reverso no se cierra en la parte inferior, y con sus tres líneas verticales unidas por tres horizontales se diría que es un dibujo esquemático similar al de las costillas que nacen del esternón.

La diferencia con el anterior triente se aprecia en el anverso, pues la X de REX es una +. En el reverso la leyenda está cortada por las líneas del busto: + EMERI-T-APIVS. En cuanto al estilo, vemos que dichas letras de ambas caras son mas grandes, el busto del anverso mas pequeño y mucho más alargado el del reverso.

Emerita fue una de las cecas importantes de esta época, y también, una de las que acuñó mas cantidad de trientes a lo largo de todo el periodo visigodo.

La técnica de acuñación de los pueblos germanos en Hispania será la misma de las épocas anteriores, esto es, a martillo. Los instrumentos utilizados eran la fragua para calentar el cospel, el yunque donde se clavaba el cuño del reverso, las tenazas para sostener el cospel colocado entre el cuño fijo (reverso) y el móvil (anverso) y el martillo para golpear. También, como en la época romana, debieron de abundar los "monetari" y sus "collegia", profesión que iba unida a la de orfebres y metalúrgicos en general.

La principal variante con el anterior triente la encontramos en el reverso donde la S de PIVS esta tumbada, característica descrita en Miles con las letras c, f y h del nº 94, pero a diferencia de las dos primeras (c y f) en la presente moneda, la leyenda del anverso finaliza en + y de la tercera (h), no está separada la leyenda del reverso como la describe Miles.

Algunos autores han querido ver en el reverso, el busto del heredero al trono corazado, de ahí, que sea totalmente distinto al del anverso, en el que el rey iría drapeado. Son simples conjeturas, pues es difícil llegar, por medio de estos dibujos tan esquemáticos, a una conclusión definitiva.

Liuva II sucede en el trono a su padre Recaredo I a la edad de dieciocho años. El goyo Witerico obtuvo el mando del ejército, en el cual colocó a hombres de su confianza para luchar contra los bizantinos. Pero en lugar de expulsar a éstos, utilizó su tropa contra el rey. En la primavera del 603 penetró en el palacio real y depuso al joven Liuva II, contando sin duda con el apoyo de una parte de la nobleza. Witerico hizo que le amputaran a Liuva II, la mano derecha, y mas tarde lo condenó a muerte en el verano del 603.

Solo se conoce el tipo presente de las raras piezas acuñadas por este monarca en la ceca de Toledo, ilustrado en Miles lámina VII, nº 2 y en Chaves página 71, nº 80.

Ispali es la única ceca de la "Provintia Baetica" que acuñó bajo Liuva II. No se conocen trientes de Liuva II de Córdoba, Tucci, Asidona, Egabro, Eliberri o Barbi, aunque esto no implica que puedan aparecer en un futuro próximo alguno más. Por regla general, tenían casas de moneda todas las cabezas de obispado. La aparición de un triente de ceca desconocida, si ésta es sede episcopal no debe extrañar, de hecho, la numismática dentro del periodo visigodo, es prolífica en cuanto a piezas inéditas; tal es así, que el magnífico trabajo de Miles "The Coinage of the Visigoths of Spain. Leovigild to Achila II" redactado en 1952, ha quedado desfasado por falta de esos trientes desconocidos en aquella época y que han ido surgiendo a lo largo de los últimos años.

La ceca de Elvora acuña también en los reinados de Leovigildo, Recaredo I, Witerico, Gundemaro, Sisebuto, Suintila, Ervigio, Egica y Witiza. Esta localidad fué denominada en la época romana, Liberalitas Julia, gracias a los privilegios otorgados por Julio Cesar. Es de origen celtíbero y se llamó primitivamente Ebora siendo después un antiquísimo obispado de Portugal, elevado a la categoría de arzobispado en 1544. Existen cinco variantes de la ceca de Emerita bajo Liuva II descritas en el catálogo de Miles, que van desde la letra A a la E. Seguimos al profesor Mateu y LLopis cuando nos dice, en la página 345 del "Catálogo de las Monedas Previsigodas y Visigodas del Gabinete Numismático del Museo Arqueológico Nacional", que la provincia Lusitania presenta tipos monetarios propios y característicos, como se verá al hablar de la más importante de sus cecas, de Emerita. En anverso aparece el busto de frente de forma redonda y en el reverso sumamente alargado, lo que da a las monedas visigodas de Lusitania unas características indudables y un matiz diferencial inequívoco, tan resaltado como es el de la Tarragonensis, por ejemplo.

Las dos primeras siglas con las que empieza la leyenda del anverso, DN son la abreviación de DOMINUS NOSTER (Nuestro Señor) que se colocaban antes de grabar el nombre del rey. Dichas iniciales solo las vemos al principio de periodo visigodo, con Leovigildo, Recaredo I, Liuva II y al final, a partir de Wamba hasta Achila.

Todos ellos el busto del anverso es más pequeño que el del reverso. Ambos mantos son similares y la S del final de la leyenda está tumbada.

Tras haber condenado a muerte a Liuva II, Witerico sube al trono en el 603. Perteneciente a la nobleza, intentó restaurar el arrianismo sin éxito, al mismo tiempo que se expulsaba a los bizantinos. Continuó la política de sus antecesores estableciendo una alianza con Teodorico II, rey de Borgoña, ofreciendo en matrimonio a su hija Hermimberga. Pero pasados unos meses, el rey gallo la devuelve a Hispania al no haberse consumado el matrimonio. Indignado por tal ofensa, Witerico prepara la guerra aliándose con Agilulfo, rey de los longobardos, y con Clotario II, rey franco. Es asesinado en el 609 en el transcurso de un banquete cuando estudiaba el plan a seguir.

Ambos bustos son similares, aunque mas grande el del anverso y concuerdan con el dibujo de Miles página 58 nº 5a propio de esta ceca en este reinado. Eliberri o Eleberri (actualmente Granada) fue fundada por los iberos y llamada por los romanos Iliberri. Era junto a Ispali y Córdoba la mas importante ciudad de la "Provintia Baetica". Hecho demostrado es que prácticamente acuñaron en ella todos los reyes visigodos, cosa que no ocurre en las cecas episcopales pequeñas que emiten moneda durante pocos reinados y de manera esporádica. Eliberri era un centro económico con capitalidad de región o de conjunto de comarcas. No hace mucho aún numerosos estudiosos sostienen que Eliberri es Pinos Puente, o bien Medina Elvira, antiguas ruinas asentadas en la falda de la sierra de este nombre y en cuyas cercanías se han hallado importantes restos arqueológicos romanos, cristianos primitivos y árabes.

La antigua Colonia Romula tuvo ceca visigoda de extraordinaria importancia. El círculo casi cerrado de la nobleza visigoda nos hace pensar que las emisiones de los trientes no podía ser a gran escala. Desechada la opinión de ciertos autores, que consideran la moneda de oro visigoda como un instrumento simplemente de propaganda, tampoco podemos afirmar la hipótesis de una circulación monetaria profusa. Es indudable la existencia de un cierto comercio, pues así lo atestigua los oficiales llamados "telonarii" que cobraban un impuesto para actividades económicas. Pero, principalmente los trientes se movían dentro de la dinámica basada en el poder entre la monarquía, el militar y la nobleza, quedando el pueblo al margen. Por eso, no se debe hablar de la existencia de una verdadera economía en la época visigoda, pues la moneda debió estar lejos de la clase humilde, incluso de comerciantes y artesanos. La explotación de los productos agrícolas propios de la península, como vino, granos, aceite etc., sería la que proveería del oro indispensable para mantener la masa monetaria, ya que este metal era escaso. En definitiva, pues, el triente transitaba en el círculo cerrado comprendido entre la monarquía y su aparato de Estado, y una salida para pagos militares o adquisición de productos de lujo destinados, también exclusivamente, para dicha oligarquía.

La actual Mérida fue en época romana una de las ciudades más importantes de Hispania y así lo atestiguan sus monumentos, tales como las puertas del recinto romano, cuyos restos de una de ellas se veía no hace mucho tiempo en el sitio llamado Puerta de la Villa, el arco llamado de Trajano, los puentes sobre el Guadiana y sobre el Albarregas, el anfiteatro, el teatro, cuyas excavaciones y estudios recientes hacen de este monumento uno de los más completos entre los conocidos del mundo romano. El circo, los acueductos, etc. La segunda etapa es la del dominio visigodo y por último la del poder mahometano. Abderraman dió al traste con lo mejor de Mérida, primero por las rapiñas en provecho de la mezquita cordobesa, más tarde por los asedios y rebeliones de que fue teatro. En el siglo XIV la ciudad estaba casi desierta y arruinada y no era más que un esqueleto de lo que había sido. Sus vestigios, sin embargo, eran tan monumentales que en 1580 Felipe II mandó a Juan de Herrera que confeccionase unos documentos sobre tales obras de arte, dibujándolas y midiéndolas, pero desgraciadamente dichos diseños, que hoy serían excepcionales, desaparecieron en el incendio del Alcázar de Madrid el 24 de diciembre de 1734.

El anverso es similar al anterior, aunque de distinto cuño; por el contrario existen dos diferencias muy acusadas en el reverso, la S de PIVS está tumbada y las dos líneas verticales que dibujan el busto del monarca separan las letras IT de EMERITA. Dicho busto es más ancho y se compone de tres líneas horizontales, en lugar de cuatro que es el caso del anterior y de los dos trientes fotografiados en Miles lámina VII nº 14 y 15 y del de Chaves página 76 nº 102.

La diferencia en el anverso, con relación a los dos anteriores, la encontramos en el nombre del rey, pues aquí leemos VVITTERICVS en lugar de VVITTRICVS. En el reverso, la S de PIVS está tumbada y el busto se compone de tres líneas horizontales o costillas, pero que en este caso descienden hacia la parte central para ascender en los extremos, o sea, a la inversa que los dos trientes anteriores, y al ilustrado en Miles lámina VII nº 15 y variante del nº 14 por tener tres "costillas" en lugar de cuatro.

La gran particularidad de este triente se halla en el anverso con la S de VVITTERICVS retrógrada, variante no reseñada en Miles. Existe una gran separación entre las T. También el busto es mas alargado y mas ancho que los anteriores. En cuanto al reverso, el busto se forma de cuatro líneas paralelas descendiendo hacia el centro.

Gundemaro pertenecía a la nobleza y era el gobernador de la Narbonensis cuando fue asesinado Witerico. Proclamado rey en el año 609, restableció el dogma católico en sus estados muy deteriorados durante el anterior reinado. Rechazó varias invasiones de sus enemigos y sometió a los vascones, eternos insumisos, consiguiendo así proporcionar al país de un periodo de dos años de paz. El acto mas importante de su mandato tuvo lugar en la reunión del Concilio celebrado en Toledo (23 de octubre del 610), en el que se eligió como sede metropolitana dicha ciudad.

En cuanto al presente triente destaquemos que el tipo del busto es propio de las acuñaciones de la Tarragonensis, caracterizado por el ropón cruzado y en forma de V, unas veces con la fibula sobre el hombro derecho y otras veces sobre el izquierdo. Las letras C, A, O, son de caracteres mas pequeños que las otras.

La decadencia del arte monetario se da en la Tarragonensis durante el reinado de Ervicio, donde el busto está ya lejos del estilo tradicional, resultando entonces una figura esquemática y bárbara, semejante a las de la Cartaginensis.

Es variante de Miles 166b por la letra D que lleva el nombre del rey GVUNDEMARVS, similar a la P descrita en el nº 166a, y de Chaves nº 127 por no llevar X al final leyenda anverso REX y por la N del reverso MENTESA con caracteres normales.

La antigua Mentesa, situada en el camino de Cartago Nova a Castulo por Acci, es hoy la actual La Guardia, cerca de Jaén, donde aún se aprecian importantes ruinas. Es mencionada por Plinio y en el Itinerario de Antonino. No hay que confundirla con la Mentesa del país de los Oretanos cuyo emplazamiento sería el actual San Carlos del Valle (Ciudad Real).

Es variante de Miles (ver lámina VIII nº 9) y de Chaves (ver nº 128) por la N de GVUNDEMARVS invertida. Todas las piezas conocidas de este monarca acuñadas en Toledo llevan la S, de PIVS, tumbada.

Durante el reinado de Gundemaro se traslada la capitalidad eclesiástica de Cartagena a Toledo, gracias a un decreto regio, alcanzando de ese modo dicha ciudad mayor peso en la política visigoda. Y sin embargo todos los trientes de Gundemaro acuñados en esta ceca son raros.

Desde el punto de vista numismático es curioso que en el anverso y en el reverso se coloque el busto repetido del monarca, aunque existe la teoría que el del reverso se refiere al futuro heredero del trono, como un mero deseo de facilitar la sucesión. De ahí se explicaría la evolución posterior, donde aparecerán en el anverso los dos bustos afrontados, pero con solo el nombre del monarca reinante en la leyenda, como se ve, por ejemplo, en las piezas de Chindasvinto en Narbona. Sea como sea, al estudiar ambos bustos de las piezas acuñadas en la Carthaginensis detectamos un arte más toscos que el de la Tarraconensis; pues no se aprecian aquellos elementos que, como el "paludamentum" o la fibula, recordaban la indumentaria clásica, sino que, por el contrario están diseñados por cuatro líneas paralelas, dos a dos, cruzándose en ángulo, cuyos vértices sostiene la cabeza del monarca.

El tipo de este triente es variante de los conocidos por el tamaño superior de ambos bustos, así como por la primera I de ELIBERRI inclinada en otra dirección a la que ilustran los catálogos de Miles (ver lámina VIII, nº 10), Carles Tolrá (ver lámina 21 nº 1008) y Chaves (ver nº 129). Existen diversas variantes similares a la presente pieza durante el periodo visigodo, en cuyo Estado entraban elementos principalmente romanos, pues no se aprecian indicios germánicos ni canónicos. Los visigodos se cuidaron de latinizar sus costumbres hasta el último extremo, ya que su situación no era tan independiente para pensar en organizarse por cuenta propia, ni tan rica para poder vivir con absoluta independencia de las estructuras romanas y lograr de hecho la pretendida organización propia. Era un Estado, el visigodo, dentro de otro estado, el romano, donde la moneda halla su raíz en el segundo. Y no podrá ser de otro modo, pues remontándonos a varios siglos pasados, encontramos que los germanos del Rhin, según Tácito, no tenían moneda propia y los habitantes del interior de Germania comerciaban aún por medio de la permuta. Así, los godos hubieron de acostumbrarse al uso de la moneda romana, desde que ocuparon la Dacia de Trajano.

Mucho se ha escrito sobre la moneda visigoda. Durante una época lejana se pensó que no eran sino medallas conmemorativas, o a lo sumo se les asignaba el carácter de piezas que conmemoraban hechos gloriosos. Esta fue la teoría de Fernández Guerra. Teoría que es insostenible, entre otras razones por la unidad de peso que caracteriza las acuñaciones visigodas, pues todos los trientes darán, si son legítimos, un peso alrededor de 1,500 grs. No puede alegarse que existan monedas de oro bajo y aún de plata, ya que si durante el periodo visigodo se varió la ley, conservaron, sin embargo fielmente la talla, salvo algún momento excepcional, como el del rey Tulga, por ejemplo. A los trientes se refieren algunas leyes de Fuego Juzgo, coincidiendo con San Isidoro y con la tradición romana, en la que le dan la equivalencia de la tercera parte del sólido, el cual siguió siendo en Occidente la base del sistema monetario muchos años después de la caída del Imperio Romano.

Existen varias peculiaridades en este triente que lo hacen muy interesante. En anverso, la D de GVUNDEMARS es una B. Miles 169 a y b describe trientes con P, pero desconoce la B. La S final del nombre del rey esta invertida, y la X de REX es de tamaño pequeño. En cuanto al reverso apreciamos que tambien la S de PIVS esta invertida y se asemeja a una Z, y sin embargo la S de ISPALI la encontramos en posición correcta. Muchas de estas equivocaciones se deben a la premura que en determinados casos debieron de acuñar por falta de circulante y por la escasa cultura de los monederos, los cuales se preocupaban mas de que el peso del triente fuese el marcado por la ley que de aspectos estéticos o etimológicos.

Este triente es rarísimo como lo demuestra que ni Miles ni Chaves lo ilustran, aunque si lo catalogan con el nº 171 y 132 respectivamente. Falta en Heiss, así como en Vidal Quadras y Carles Tolrà. Tampoco salía ningún ejemplar similar en la subasta de la "Société de Banque Suisse" (Basel 21 - 23 de enero de 1997), donde se puso a la venta la mas completa colección de monedas visigodas conocida hasta la fecha. El profesor Mateu y Llopis desconoce el triente de Elvora acuñado bajo Gundemaro (ver página 356).

El busto de ambas caras es similar al dibujado en Miles página 58 nº 5a. La D de GVUNDEMARS es de hecho una P, la O de ELVORA mas pequeña con relación a las otras letras, y la R tanto del anverso como el reverso se asemejan a una F. Lusitania conquistada al reino de los suevos se erigió en la eclesiástica visigoda, siendo Emerita la villa primada, que comprendía las siguientes sedes episcopales: Exonoba, Pace, Elvora, Olisibona, Egitania, Cauria, Eminio, Veseo, Lameco, Caliabria, Salmantica y Abula, pero solo llegan a acuñar monedas: Emerita, Elvora, Egitania, Eminio, Veseo, Lameco, Salmantica, Caliabria, Coleia y Valentia.

Para finalizar digamos que las letras IVS, que vemos al final de la leyenda del reverso, debe unirse con las del principio de dicha leyenda: TVS, teniendo así la palabra completa latina IVSTVS (justa, legítima, recta, etc.) adjetivo con el que se ensalza a la ciudad de Elvora, del mismo modo que, por ejemplo, en la siguiente moneda, la ceca de Emerita va precedida de PIVS (Emerita piadosa, virtuosa, honesta, etc.). Aunque, sin embargo, hay numismáticos que sostienen que dichos topónimos (Pius, Iustus, etc.) hacen referencia a las cualidades del rey y no a las de la ciudad. Si fuera así, deberíamos traducir la leyenda de este triente como, Gundemaro rey justo en Evora.

Miles cataloga tres tipos distintos del triente acuñado en Emerita bajo Gundemaro, 172 a, b y c. Ninguno de ellos hace referencia al presente. En el anverso, la X de REX es de tamaño mucho mas pequeño y la A de GVUNDEMARS lleva el travesaño horizontal y no es la clásica visigoda V invertida que vemos en el reverso, donde la última letra, S, está tumbada. El busto del anverso es completamente ovalado, con punto en los espacios divididos por la vertical que nace del cuello. El del reverso, clásico de esta ceca, no llega a dividir la leyenda y se compone de cuatro costillas paralelas y que descienden hacia la línea central. La cara esta formada por un trazo vertical (nariz), abierto en la parte superior por dos semicircunferencias (cejas) y dos puntos bajo ellas (ojos).

SISEBUTO (612 - 621)

NARBONENSIS

Narbona

- 693 Triente. Anv.: XSISECTVS RE: Busto de frente. Rev.: NARBoNADIV: Busto de frente. 1,409 grs. Miles
-. MBC. RARÍSIMA.

Hasta la publicación del artículo de Ruth Pliego, en Gaceta Numismática (nº 146 Septiembre 2002 página 23), se desconocía que la ciudad de Narbona hubiese acuñado durante el reinado de Sisebuto. El presente triente es variante de aquél, no solo en el estilo, sino también en la leyenda.

La provincia Narbonensis adquiere su nombre de la ciudad de Narbona, antigua Narbo de la época romana situada al sur de la Galia y posteriormente parte del Languedoc y la Provenza. Sus acuñaciones de imitación empiezan durante el reinado de Anastasio, para continuar bajo Justino I y Justiniano, apareciendo a veces en sus leyendas las iniciales de los reyes en trientes de copias bizantinas. También en algunos sueldos se ve al final de la leyenda la sigla N como marca de ceca. Todo ello hará proclamar a Sidonio Apolinar los siguientes versos: "Salve Narbo potens salubritate/Delubris, Capitolii, Monetis". No cabe duda que esta ciudad, que comenzó a acuñar en el Imperio Romano con Augusto y Galba, siguiendo la tradición de la época ibérica con la leyenda Neroncen, es una de las Casas de Moneda más importantes de la numismática antigua.

En otro apartado ya hemos indicado que existían cecas que podríamos denominar fijas al ostentar la capitalidad de Estado o comarca, y otras efímeras o móviles. Pues bien, si en las segundas se hace difícil encontrar trientes inéditos, mucho más será hacerlo en las primeras, como es el caso de la presente moneda.

- 694 Triente. Anv.: XSISEBVTVS REX Busto de frente. Rev.: X'CE:A:C·O:TAIV: Busto de frente. 1,447 grs.
Miles -. EBC. MUY RARA.

Miles reseña dos variantes de Cesaraugusta (174a y b), ambas distintas a la presente, pues ésta inicia la leyenda del anverso con X y no con +, y la X de REX es de tamaño igual al de las otras letras. En cuanto al reverso, no lleva la O ó la

S al final de la leyenda, tal como las cataloga Miles. Ambos bustos se cubren con idéntico ropaje, propio de las acuñaciones de la Tarragonensis con la fibula sobre el hombro izquierdo que sujetaba el "paludamentum" cruzado. Dicha similitud no se aprecia en las monedas emitidas en las otras provincias. Por lo tanto, las emisiones Tarragonensis no hacen diferencia entre el rey y el príncipe sucesor o rey asociado. El nombre del monarca va siempre seguido de su título (REX) y tras él de la ceca, que aparece en el reverso, encontramos el complemento de ésta, que por lo general es IVSTVS o su abreviación IV (como en el caso de la presente), dándose la excepción de PIVS, mayormente en la capital.

La decadencia en el arte monetario se da en esta provincia con Ervicio, cuyo busto, lejos del estilo tradicional, resulta una figura esquemática y bárbara semejante a las acuñadas en la Cartaginensis.

Cesaraugusta o Cesarcosta, es después de Tarraco, la más importante de las capitales de esta provincia, pues era centro económico de la región del Ebro y como ceca, se remonta al periodo ibérico con el topónimo de Salduie, para posteriormente denominarse Colonia Caesar Augusta ya en época de Augusto.

Esta ceca, que es la mas importante de la Hispania oriental, comenzó las acuñaciones visigodas con Leovigildo. Su taller monetario funcionó casi ininterrumpidamente durante toda la cronología de los reyes visigodos e incluso aún posteriormente a Witiza, bajo Achila, pretendiente usurpador. El área de expansión de la moneda emitida en Tarraco era grande, como lo demuestran las monedas encontradas en tesorillos descubiertos en Andalucía, lo cual prueba la falta de talleres monetarios, si exceptuamos Dertosa (Tortosa), a lo largo de la costa del Ebro. El prestigio de esta ceca arranca en la época ibérica con el nombre de Cese o Kese, donde encontramos denarios, ases, semis, etc. de arte helénico y de una fabricación muy depurada.

La denominación Tarraco se la debemos a la República Romana cuando la bautizó como Colonia Iulia Urbs Triumphalis Tarraco. Pero según el numismático Beniges i Olivé el nombre latino Tarraco viene de un término ibérico; esta teoría la avalaría el dracma de imitación emporitana hallado recientemente con la leyenda Tarakonsalir. Por lo tanto, para dicho numismático, Kese haría referencia al nombre étnico de los pobladores de la región, los Kesetanos, mientras Tarraco sería el lugar donde se acuñaron en un principio las monedas con leyenda Kese. Posiblemente los romanos respetaron tal leyenda con el fin de que fueran reconocidas por los indígenas y en consecuencia pudieran recaudar los impuestos con mas facilidad.

Tanto Miles (lámina IX nº 3) como Chaves (página 85 nº 142) ilustran un triente con la particularidad de que las tres S de la leyenda del anverso SI SE : VTVS RE, las dos primeras están invertidas y la tercera tumbada; en cuanto a las dos S del reverso IVSTVS, la primera está invertida y la segunda tumbada. Heiss desconoce el triente de Acci acuñado bajo Sisebuto.

Acci o Colonia Iulia Gemella, hoy la actual Guadix según el eminentísimo numismático L. Villaronga, empezó a emitir monedas bajo el emperador Octavio Augusto, para posteriormente continuar con Tiberio y Calígula. Fue sede episcopal desde los primeros tiempos del cristianismo y como centro económico, pujante durante todo el siglo VII a juzgar por sus acuñaciones.

El tipo de moneda que emite es el clásico de la Carthaginensis y mas propiamente del grupo de talleres limítrofes con la Baetica. Su actividad se desarrolla sobre todo en los reinados de Sisebuto, Suintila, Sisenando y Chintilla. Actividad que, como muy bien apunta Mateu y Llopis, coincide con el retroceso de los bizantinos o avance de los visigodos hacia el Este y Sudoeste.

La variante de Miles, con referencia a esta pieza, la encontramos en el reverso donde la N de MENTESA es de hecho una H, cosa que no ocurre en la ilustrada por él (ver lámina IX, nº 4).

Mentesa forma parte de la línea divisoria con la Baetica, compuesta de Sur a Norte por cuatro cecas visigodas Acci, Mentesa, Biatia y Castulona. A juzgar por su abundantes acuñaciones, que empiezan en Recaredo I para continuar hasta Witiza, se diría que fue un centro económico considerable y quizás el mas destacado después de Toledo de la provincia Carthaginensis.

Situada en la vía de Eliberri al Guadalquivir quedaba justo dentro del límite administrativo de la Tarraconensis en la época romana, a todas luces arbitrario, pues la línea divisoria se desviaba hacia la izquierda para poder incluirla en esta provincia, cuando Eliberri, mas oriental, pertenecía a la Baetica.

Sisebuto fue uno de los reyes visigodos más eruditos, como lo demuestra su obra "Vida de San Desiderio" y su notable poema titulado Astronomicum que consta de cincuenta y cinco versos hexámetros latinos, escritos tras algunos eclipses acaecidos en los años 611 y 612 y que seguramente, por la ignorancia del pueblo, hizo renacer ciertas prácticas paganas. Acérximo defensor del catolicismo se permitió designar obispos, así como dictarles unas pautas de comportamiento. Inició una feroz persecución contra los judíos promulgando leyes, que no llegaron a ponerse en práctica, en las que les prohibía poseer esclavos o trabajadores a sueldo. También castigó severamente al cristiano que se convertía al judaísmo, desterrándole de por vida. En el aspecto militar, y como primer acto de soberanía, envió a sus generales (entre ellos Suintila) a reprimir un levantamiento de los astures y vascones y él mismo se embarcó posteriormente en una flota visigoda, de reciente creación, para desembarcar en las costas de Cantabria sin que sepamos a ciencia cierta el resultado de los combates. En el 614 y 615 se enfrentó contra los bizantinos, siendo su principal victoria la conquista de Málaga y obligando al emperador Heraclio a pedir la paz, otorgada tras haberle entregado las ciudades meridionales de Hispania. Falleció repentinamente en febrero del 621 en Toledo, de muerte natural, sucediéndole su hijo Recaredo II.

Toledo fue célebre por sus concilios, en los cuales, entraba el rey con su corte y exponía los temas a tratar, ya fueran eclesiásticos o civiles. Tras la proclamación del "Tomus", el rey volvía a intervenir al final del concilio cuando firmaba las actas. En algunos concilios aparecen también decretos o leyes explícitamente promulgadas por el monarca, como por ejemplo la disminución de los impuestos en el Concilio Toledano XIII. Se debe a la España visigoda el primer "Ordo" sobre la forma litúrgica de celebración de un concilio. Casi todos los posteriores se basan en su estructura, hasta llegar a nuestros tiempos en que el Concilio Vaticano II, en su primera sesión televisada, usó las reglas litúrgicas establecidas por los padres del de Toledo del año 633.

Este triente tiene la particularidad de no llevar la X o la + al final de la leyenda del anverso, quedando la palabra REX abreviada en RE. Variante que no señala Miles (ver nº 183a y 183b), ni Chaves (ver 144), tampoco Vidal Quadras hace referencia a esta emisión (ver tomo I página 416 nº 5094) ni Heiss (ver lámina V nº 13). Las letras del anverso son de mayor tamaño que las del triente anterior y también, como aquella, la S de PIVS (final leyenda reverso), está tumbada.

En el caso del triente presente nos encontramos que falta la letra E de SISBVTVS, omisión no indicada en los catálogos especializados de monedas visigodas. Ocurre, con relativa frecuencia, alteraciones de la palabra REX por RE como hemos visto en la anterior pieza, pero es muy raro encontrar la eliminación por error de una de las letras que componen el nombre del rey.

Si bien en lo referente a la ley y peso la obligatoriedad se comprueba en la "Lex Visigothorum", pues dispone "ut solidum integri ponderis nemo recuset", no ocurre así con la leyenda. Ni tampoco posteriormente con la aleación, ya que cada vez será mayor la cantidad de plata que entra en la liga hasta llegar a emisiones casi exclusivamente de este metal en los últimos tiempos visigodos. Leovigildo introdujo la ley de 18 quilates en sus primeras emisiones (busto en anverso y Victoria en reverso) que empezó a oscilar entre 16 y 14 quilates a partir de Viterico. Con Chindasvinto y Recesvinto vuelve a los 18 quilates en algunos determinados casos. Desde Wamba predominan los 14 quilates y con Egica y Witiza (tipo bustos afrontados) encontramos ya trientes totalmente de plata.

La X de REX es de tamaño inferior a la ilustrada en Miles (ver lámina IX nº 6) y también a la ilustrada en Chaves nº 144. Es de resaltar el peso de este triente 1,543 grs.

Transcribimos literalmente a Mateu y Llopis: "de una libra de oro se sacaban 216 tremis visigodos; ésta era su talla, o sea 1/3 del solidus constantiniano. La libra romana, según Vázquez Queipo, pesaba 325 grs.; un "exagium" de la libra del tiempo de Justiniano, del Museo del Louvre, pesa 325,51 grs. Heiss dedujo un peso para la onza de 27 grs. y, por consiguiente, para la libra de 324 grs. Admitida esta última cifra que difiere poco de las otras dos, el peso de un tercio de sueldo estaría representado por 324 : 216 o sea 150 centigramos, cantidad dada por el peso medio encontrado para los tremis visigodos".

A diferencia del triente anterior, en el presente, la X es de tamaño similar a las letras que componen el resto de la leyenda. En la historia monetaria del Estado visigodo hay que distinguir tres etapas. El reino de Tolosa (419-573), el de transición, y el reino de Toledo (573-711). Las dos primeras series son de imitación, es decir, predominan la esencia y características de los sueldos y tremis bizantinos, pero ejecutados con manos inexpertas que le dan un aire barbarizante. En el tercero, como ya hemos indicado, se labra la moneda que podríamos llamar nacional, con tipos inspirados en los sólidos imperiales sobre todo en la metrología, pero con elementos de identificación, como el nombre del rey y de la ceca o taller donde fueron acuñados.

¿Por qué, se pregunta el estudioso Miquel Crusafont, los visigodos basaron su numerario exclusivamente en el oro? a la inversa de Bizancio, que no disponía de plata en abundancia y por lo tanto basó sus acuñaciones en el sólido, los visigodos emitieron el triente precisamente por la sobrevaloración del oro a causa de su escasez. A pesar de los pocos datos de precios de la época, Crusafont nos dice que por algo más de un sólido, es decir, por el equivalente a tres treintas, se puede estimar que se cubrían los gastos de alimentación de una persona de nivel medio a lo largo de un año. Un buen salario era fijado en tres sólidos anuales. Tal cosa es demostrativa de que el valor oro estaba muy alto en relación a los productos.

Los documentos que se conservan de la época visigoda son todos latinos. En las monedas, aparte del estilo más o menos bárbaro que campea en la escritura, según los reinados y también según los lugares de la acuñación, hay ciertas variantes como por ejemplo la A que aparece por lo general sin el travesaño horizontal similar a una V invertida. La D suele llevar el trazo vertical más largo que el semicircular y es preciso no confundirla con una P. También se ve con frecuencia en forma de delta griego. La S está muchas veces invertida y otras tantas tumbada, y la X es frecuente verla como una simple cruz. Pero la que representa mayor número de diferencias epigráficas es la G, pues se asemeja en la mayoría a una C, aunque en momentos puntuales también se suele asimilar a una S lo cual induce con frecuencia a error en la lectura de las inscripciones. Así mismo veremos leyendas en las que se omiten ciertas letras colocando uno o dos puntos en su lugar, como por ejemplo TIR : S : NA por Tirasona; CAST · L · NA por Castulona, o C : AR : CO : TA por Cesaraugusta.

Curiosísima pieza en la que se advierten rectificaciones del cuño, no solo en las letras, como por ejemplo en la I de SISEBVTVS donde se aprecia una V en bajo relieve, sino también en el campo, pues en el reverso, cabeza y busto parecen estar unidos por una linea ovalada. Estas rectificaciones, repito, se efectuaban en el cuño y por lo tanto no son alteraciones realizadas con posterioridad a su emisión, como se demuestra tácitamente al observar las dos S incusas o invertidas que aparecen entre la I, la V y la S de PIVS. A lo sumo podría tratarse también de restos de la anterior estampación por falta de limpieza de los cuños.

La rareza de este triente nos la indica Mateu y Llopis cuando escribe: "Heiss registra solamente los tres últimos reyes (se refiere a Sisebutus, Sisenando y Tulga como monarcas que emiten piezas en Barbi), pero he visto una moneda de Sisebutus, de esta ceca, en poder del Sr. Reinhart en agosto de 1935, comprada en París.

La localización de Barbi es incierta. Según Florez el municipio Barbitano se hallaría cerca de Tucci, la actual Martos, (Prov. de Jaén). Algunos historiadores nos dicen que es preciso no confundir Barbi con Barba situada, según el itinerario de Antonino Pio, en el camino de Cádiz a Córdoba, alrededor de 30 Km. antes de llegar a Antequera. Pero el magnífico trabajo de Sebastián Corzo y Susana Sempere publicado en Numisma nº 236, página 125, con el título: "La ceca visigoda Barbi: Aspectos históricos y arqueológicos", da luz a una nueva ubicación sobre esta localidad. Tras un examen exhaustivo y analizando todas las posibilidades llegan a la conclusión que Barbi no es otra que la antigua ciudad romana llamada Singilia Barba, Antequera (Prov. de Málaga).

Miles clasifica esta variante (RI en lugar de RE al final de la leyenda del anverso) gracias al suplemento que Campaner adjuntó a su obra Numismática Española, 1891, en la que nos dice en la página 562 "que tuvo lugar un hallazgo de trientes visigodos y del que puede dar noticias gracias a su amigo D. Celestino Pujol y Camps, comisionado por la Real Academia de la Historia. Se encontró en un cortijo de Carmona y debió enterrarse durante el reinado de Sisenando, a quien pertenecen los trientes más modernos. El dueño de la finca se reservó doscientos cincuenta; un vecino de Sevilla adquirió quinientas cincuenta repartiéndose las restantes entre particulares de Carmona". Pues bien, esta moneda es una de las encontradas que abarcan el periodo entre Viterico y Sisenando acuñadas en distintas cecas. Barbi poseía taller monetario sin ser sede eclesiástica, cosa excepcional en la "Provintia Baetica" y como lo demuestra que Miles solo anota dos variantes de esta ceca.

El presente triente es variante de Miles por final de la leyenda del anverso RIX en lugar de RI +, y por S tumbada en lugar de S retrógrada al final de la leyenda del reverso (ver lámina IX nº 7 no concuerda con su descripción, página 262 nº 185). Chaves, que clasifica una variante a ésta pero no la fotografía con el nº 146, comete un error al decir que Miles no publica el triente de Sisebuto acuñado en Córdoba. Campaner, en su Indicador Manual de la Numismática Española, página 213, hace constar la emisión de Córdoba bajo Sisebuto, pero como pieza inédita, en poder de D.R. Cervera. El tipo de busto de anverso y reverso, similares en diseño, es clásico de Córdoba, con sus tres semilunas o pestañas a ambos lados de la línea vertical que forma el tronco (ver Miles página 62 tipo 9b). Posiblemente por su característica de independencia, Córdoba forma un grupo aparte de temas enteramente originales e irrepetibles, difícil de darse en una época donde abundan gran cantidad de cuños rutinarios y decadentes. La originalidad de sus tipos supera a Ispali y es de largo el taller monetario de mayor vitalidad artística de cuantos funcionaron en el reino visigodo.

El título de Patricia dado por los romanos a Córdoba (Colonia Patricia) lo conserva para actualizarlo a partir del reinado de Chindasvinto colocándolo en su leyenda.

Eliberri estaba situada sobre la base del poblado ibérico denominado Ildubeibe. Famosos fueron sus dupondios y ases con su original triquelión en reverso. Su ubicación, como ya mencionamos en otro apartado, se da por cierta que es la actual Granada, aunque ciertos numismáticos, como Villaronga, sostienen que podría tratarse de Florentia (Municipium Florentinum Iliberritanum) en los alrededores de Granada. Si se examina el mapa arqueológico de España durante esta época, se advierte una correspondencia entre las antiguas ciudades romanas de la Tarracensis y de la Baetica, especialmente con las cecas visigodas de mayor importancia, correlación que no se da en Gallaecia y en el área que más tarde será Castellano-Leonesa, donde los monumentos visigodos aparecen en lugares en que no hubo creaciones arquitectónicas romanas.

Es variante de Miles por finalizar la leyenda del anverso en RI, en lugar de RE y por no llevar puntos al final de la leyenda del reverso. De estilo toscó y con la caligrafía más imprecisa que la anterior pieza, muestra ambos bustos idénticos, clásicos de esta ceca (ver Miles página 58 nº 5e). Es curioso apreciar las diferencias, no solo de leyenda, sino también de estilo, que encontramos en trientes batidos en un mismo taller y bajo un mismo reinado. Y sin embargo, las constantes son siempre idénticas según sean las provincias. Por ejemplo, el rey y su príncipe o sucesor nunca llevan barba, cosa que no ocurre con los emperadores bizantinos coetáneos como Flavio Heraclio I (610 - 641) que aparece a veces barbado. A partir de Leovigildo se crea el triente de ambos bustos, que permanecerá inmóvil más de ochenta años a lo largo de la historia numismática sin apenas modificaciones. La duplicidad de las cabezas quiere dar a entender la sucesión del trono como algo imprescindible, para evitar la tentación de caer en la ambición y desconfianza, tan arraigada en el imperio bizantino.

He aquí una pieza realmente rara e inexplicable, pues el dibujo de los cuños no corresponde al de Eliberri. En el anverso aparece el clásico busto que la ceca de Emerita suele colocar en el reverso en la época de Sisebuto (ver Miles página 61 nº 7), el cuello muy largo se prolonga hasta el esternón, saliendo de él, a la izquierda, tres costillas paralelas entre sí, y cuatro a la derecha. Las dos líneas que delimitan el cuerpo atraviesan la leyenda y encierran la letra V de SISEBVTVS. En cuanto al tipo del reverso es similar al acuñado en el anverso en la ceca de Emerita (ver Miles página 62 nº 8c), es decir, una media circunferencia partida en dos y con punto en ambos espacios. ¿Cómo puede darse este cambio de tipos? ¿por qué Eliberri amonedó con bustos propios de Emerita?, y también, ¿por qué se coloca en anverso el busto del reverso y viceversa?. No existe una explicación lógica, pues no se trata de dos poblaciones cercanas ya que Emerita se ubica en la Lusitania y Eliberri en la Baetica. Rechazamos la idea de asimilar el diseño de Emerita para Eliberri, ya que a la muerte de Sisebuto ambos talleres continúan emitiendo con sus tipos peculiares durante los sucesivos reinados. Tampoco puede relacionarse con los errores que vemos a menudo en las leyendas. Entonces, ¿cuál es la causa de esta anomalía?. Al no tener una hipótesis lógica de lo que pudo ocurrir, nos abstendremos de especular sobre teorías que desgraciadamente son indemostrables, como por ejemplo que el abridor de cuño de Emerita se desplazara a Eliberri y por inercia o hábito continuase grabando el tipo clásico de su antigua ciudad.

Este triente es el prototipo de los emitidos en Ispali por Sisebuto (ver Miles lámina IX nº 9 y Carles Tolrá lámina 21 nº 1009). Es una pieza impecable en cuanto a su acuñación, habiendo quedado el dibujo muy nítido, resaltando los bustos y las leyendas sobre el campo completamente plano.

La monedación visigoda es una importante fuente de información socioeconómica para el periodo posterior a la caída del Imperio Romano, pues gracias a ella sabemos que no destruyeron el comercio y que éste continuó ejerciéndolo la población hispano romana tras la llegada de los invasores. No solo la vida económica sino también la cultural continuará en poder de las capas superiores de los antiguos habitantes, aunque los godos, lentamente, irán incidiendo en diversos campos para dejar huella. Sabemos que los visigodos poseían fábricas de seda, algodón y lana, así como eran consumados artistas de orfebrería, pues combinaban los metales oro, plata y hierro con piedras preciosas, vidrios y esmaltes.

La particularidad de este triente la encontramos en los puntos que se intercalan en la leyenda, dato no indicado por los catálogos especializados en monedas visigodas.

Cuando los godos llegaron a la península, el arte predominante era el paleocristiano que irradiaba de Bizancio y estaba protegido por el Estado y la Iglesia. Gracias a las antiguas calzadas romanas se iniciaría la nueva influencia artística que va desde las costas mediterráneas hacia el interior. En la época de Sisebuto ya se había debilitado dicha influencia mediterránea a favor de un fuerte auge cultural destacando principalmente en la Baetica y la Lusitania, siendo Córdoba, Ispali y Emerita las metrópolis más pujantes. En dichos centros surgen novedades culturales en teología, poesía, retórica, filosofía y jurisprudencia, con el derecho político.

La ceca de Ispali es una de las que más variantes tiene, cosa, por otra parte, lógica si nos atenemos a la gran cantidad de moneda que puso en circulación.

Si bien ya hemos indicado en otro apartado, que el comercio lo desarrollaban los antiguos hispano romanos que habitaban en la península antes de la llegada de los godos, éstos, como clase dirigente y minoritaria, al acaparar todos los poderes civiles y militares, necesitaban un fuerte numerario para pagar al ejército. La casta militar era pues de distinta etnia a la autóctona y por lo tanto, extraña al país. Los líderes hispanos, acostumbrados a la fuerte presión que ejercieron en el pasado las áreas romanizadas, ya estaban acostumbrados a vivir bajo el sometimiento de dirigentes extranjeros, por lo que la mayoría se integró en el mecanismo del poder visigodo. Lo mismo acaeció con la invasión de los árabes en la península, pues una vez vencida la monarquía visigoda junto a su norma de poder, se encontraron con un pueblo que nada tenía de visigodo y si, la costumbre heredada de obedecer al invasor.

Variante ilustrada en Miles lámina IX nº 11, donde la particularidad la encontramos en los puntos que vemos a principio de la leyenda del anverso y del reverso y también al final de éste. Hasta nueve variantes de trientes describe Miles de Sisebuto acuñados en Ispali. Y sin lugar a dudas existen muchas mas.

El perfil absolutista de la monarquía visigoda debió agravarse cuando trasladó a sus magnates los postreros vestigios del poder civil que aún ostentaban los hispano romanos. Así mismo fue incrementando las designaciones de dignidades episcopales a favor de personas de origen godo, elegidos por el rey entre su corte, constituyendo por lo tanto un superior intervencionismo en la iglesia. M. Crusafont nos indica que la relación numérica entre dirigentes y sometidos debió ser enormemente desigual, pues la masa hispano romana era con mucho superior a la población visigoda, y como dato, dicho historiador y numismático, apunta tres ejemplos: un administrador eclesiástico había dilapidado patrimonio que le fue confiado. Entre sus bienes se cita quinientos esclavos. Una comunidad eclesiástica debía contar como mínimo con una dotación de diez esclavos. En la dote de los magnates visigodos constan aportaciones en dinero del orden del 10 por ciento de los bienes y además diez esclavos machos, diez hembras y veinte caballos. Y finaliza con la siguiente deducción: Podemos pensar, pues, en cifras de doscientos / cuatrocientos esclavos en posesión de un magnate aplicando respectivamente los porcentajes del 10 por ciento o 15 por ciento en la constitución de la dote. ¿Cuántas otras personas, agricultores no esclavos que cederían un porcentaje (1/3,2/3) de sus cosechas, estarían bajo la férula de un magnate visigodo?

Variante de la anterior por distinta puntuación, ilustrada en Miles lámina IX nº 12. Hay un exceso de oro que parece una coma entre la I y la P de ISPALIPIVS.

El oro amonedado tenía sangrias importantes, de ahí la gran cantidad de piezas que se vieron obligados a acuñar. Pongamos dos hechos como ejemplo relacionados con pagos internacionales por cuestiones militares, y que constan en documentos: 30.000 trientes a los bizantinos y 200.000 al rey franco Dagoberto. ¿Por qué los visigodos acuñaron principalmente trientes de oro cuando este metal era escaso o nulo en la península y no utilizaron en cambio, el cobre para su numerario?. La idea de M.Crusafont es que el cobre visigodo debía tener una valoración similar a los nummi bizantinos, los cuales se encontraban en una relación de precio respecto al sólido de 1/7000. Es decir, que un sólido era equivalente a 7000 nummi y por lo tanto un tremis valía 2.333 nummi o cobres. Este abismo traía como consecuencia el hecho que los cobres no fueran la moneda apropiada para atesorar y la explicación mas plausible del por qué no se encuentran piezas de cobre en los hallazgos arqueológicos.

Es variante del anterior por llevar también punto al principio y final de la leyenda del reverso, variante ilustrada en Miles lámina IX nº 11.

Sin lugar a dudas, el área mas activa en el campo numismático la encontramos en las provincias occidentales de la península (Gallaecia, Lusitania y Baetica). Basta solo echar una ojeada al mapa donde se ubican los talleres o cecas para comprobar que la zona oriental o mediterránea que va desde Valencia a Narbona (Tarraconensis) es mas pobre, sobre todo en talleres esporádicos o provisionales, es decir, aquellos que solo acuñaron bajo pocos reinados. Pero la delimitación de ambas áreas en la emisión de trientes no debe empujarnos a pensar en la existencia de dos comunidades separadas, pues el circulante se nutría de piezas de todas las procedencias, principalmente de los talleres permanentes en donde se emitían la mayoría de las monedas.

En la lámina IX nº 16 de Miles se puede identificar esta variante con la primera S de SISEBVTVS invertida. También Heiss la clasifica en la página 104 nº 7 y la dibuja en la lámina V nº 7.

A medida que los visigodos iban asentándose en la península, la población hispano romana debía ceder a éstos dos tercios de sus propiedades, con lo cual es fácil comprobar la gran acumulación de terreno que atesoraba la aristocracia invasora. El régimen era señorial, es decir, basado en el empleo de siervos y colonos para explotación de las tierras. En cuanto al tercio propiedad de los habitantes autóctonos no podía ser adquirido por el godo, pues, como nos dice Rafael Chaves, al estar gravado con un impuesto, la Hacienda Real hubiera perdido la recaudación. La tierra no labrada o yerma pasaba a poder del municipio para uso del pueblo.

Variante del anterior por llevar las dos primeras S de SISIBVTVS invertidas. Tal modificación no consta en Miles. Sin lugar a dudas se trata de un error del grabador, pues las otras tres S que vemos en la leyenda SISEBVTVS ISPALIPIVS están en posición correcta.

Tras la eliminación en época de Leovigildo (585) del poder suevo en la zona noroeste de la península, ésta pasó a ser dominada por entero por Sisebuto si exceptuamos dos áreas. Nos referimos a la franja costera que va desde el estrecho de Gibraltar a Cartagena, que dependía aun del control de Bizancio, y la del territorio cántabro-vasco. Pero, si bien con Suintila se consiguió desalojar a los bizantinos (624), en lo referente al área del norte fue imposible a pesar de los reiterados intentos, pues un reducido permaneció en pie e inaccesible a los infructuosos ataques.

El ejército visigodo se basaba en el sistema tradicional romano. El comandante en jefe, que solía ostentar el título de duque o conde, mandaba por orden de graduación al "thufadi", "quingentenarius", "centenarius" y "decanus" llamados así según la cantidad de soldados que estaban bajo sus órdenes.

Existen diversas puntuaciones que van intercalándose en la leyenda. Esta es una de ellas, similares en cuanto al reverso a la segunda pieza de la serie Ispali bajo Sisebuto que clasificamos en el presente catálogo, pero con la variante de tres puntos también en anverso. No tenemos una explicación lógica del por qué aparecen dichos puntos, a no ser que se tratase de unas señales marcadas en el cuño para facilitar al grabador la distribución de las letras que componen la leyenda. No hemos apreciado esta anomalía en los períodos anteriores a los visigodos, ya sea en la numismática griega o bien romana.

Destacamos de este triente, aparte de la puntuación, su arte bárbaro inédito en la ceca de Ispali bajo Sisebuto. En diversos apartados señalamos la importancia del taller de Ispali, no solo en cuanto a su numerario extensísimo sino, también, a la perfección de tipos enmarcados en un estilo único, propio de la Baetica. Las letras podrán ser más o menos grandes, con errores de ubicación, omisiones, torcidas, retrógradas, invertidas, alteradas, etc. y los bustos, asimismo, se graban en diferentes tamaños, pero todo ello siempre, repetimos, bajo unas coordenadas de estilo y aire inconfundibles. Por esto, ante un triente de fabricación tan tosca como el presente, el observador queda perplejo. La superficie del cospel es irregular, y no se advierte el clásico campo pulido característico del taller de Ispali. Las cinco S de la leyenda de anverso y reverso son todas distintas en estilo y tamaño y no guardan relación entre ellas. Ambos bustos de arte tosco han quedado aun más caricaturizados debido al poco esmero con que se preparó el cospel. Esta suma de irregularidades hace pensar que el autor de este triente fue un aprendiz del oficial abridor de cuños.

Miles solo describe un tipo de Egitania bajo Sisebuto, que es el mismo que publican Florez página 232, Heiss página 103 nº 3 lámina V y Chaves nº 151 sin ilustrar, entre otros catálogos especializados en moneda visigoda.

Egitania es la actual Idanha a Velha (Portugal) y la antigua Aegiditanorum de la época romana. Fue uno de los centros comerciales más florecientes de Lusitania tras haber sido destruida por los suevos y reconstruida por los visigodos quienes la erigieron obispado. Arruinada por los sarracenos, Alfonso Henrique lo entregó a los templarios que la abandonaron a su suerte para edificar a pocos kilómetros Idanha a Velha. Actualmente pertenece a la provincia de la Beira Baja, distrito de Castelo-Branco, diócesis de Portalegre. Egitania comienza sus acuñaciones con Recaredo I y finaliza con Rodrigo, o sea, ciento veinticinco años funcionando y si exceptuamos los reyes Liuva II, Witerico, Gundemaro, Recaredo II, Chintila, Wamba y Agila, todos los demás emitieron monedas, lo que nos da una idea aproximada de la importancia que debió tener en su época como centro económico en la región del Tajo.

Añadimos a lo ya escrito en otros apartados del presente catálogo sobre la ubicación de Elvora, que, su identificación con la actual ciudad portuguesa de Evora fue admitida sin reservas por Florez; sin embargo, Alóiss Heiss cree que el estilo de sus trientes tienen mas afinidad con los emitidos en la Carthaginensis, por lo que apunta como posible ubicación, Talavera de la Reina, situada al extremo noroeste de la provincia de Toledo, sobre la orilla derecha del Tajo, y añade dicho autor, que en el año 182 A.C., el pretor Q.Fulvius Flaccus establece su campamento a la orilla del Tajo cerca del poblado de Ebura. Teoria desechada por la mayoría de los numismáticos, que la sitúan definitivamente en Lusitania, a pesar de reconocer la existencia de varias localidades denominadas Elvora a lo largo de la península durante el tiempo de los visigodos.

Miles describe solo dos variantes acuñados por Sisebuto en Elvora, ambos fotografiados en las láminas IX nº 10 y X nº 1. La presente es distinta, pues en ellas la última S de la leyenda del reverso está casi tumbada, siguiéndole dos puntos. También es variante de nuestro número anterior por el busto del reverso, busto no dibujado en Miles (ver página 58 nº 5d.) y desconocido hasta la fecha. Aunque la acuñación está corrida y por lo tanto difícil de apreciar su dibujo, es evidente que lo forman en su parte inferior, unas circunferencias o globos inéditos no solo en la ceca de Elvora sino en las restantes que acuñaron a lo largo del periodo visigodo. Esta particularidad le da una anomalía muy curiosa si tenemos en cuenta la repetición constante de los bustos que solo, por lo general, se diferencian entre ellos según sean los talleres monetarios; diferencia difícil de hallar, por el contrario, en trientes acuñados en una misma ceca y bajo un mismo rey.

Pieza similar a la ilustrada por Miles lámina X nº 2, Heiss lámina V nº 5 y Vidal Quadras tomo I página 415 nº 5087 (no ilustrada).

Es curioso e incluso incomprendible, que los tipos o dibujos de las monedas visigodas y sus coetáneas bizantinas sean tan toscos o grotescos, mas cerca de una verdadera caricatura que de un diseño oficial propio de un documento público tan solemne como lo debe ser un numerario circulante. El arte del periodo visigodo en España (siglos VI y VII) ha dejado sorprendentemente pocas muestras. Una posible razón sería su belicosa historia y posterior invasión musulmana. Pero si cogemos, por ejemplo, una de las escasas ermitas que permanecen en pie, como la de Santa María, en Quintanilla de las Viñas, veremos que se caracteriza por la riqueza escultórica y los finos frisos representando aves y racimos. Es evidente, pues, que lejos de seguir la pauta de la antigua Grecia, donde destacados escultores grabaron cuños para inmortalizar ciertas ciudades, como por ejemplo Siracusa, con los tetradracmas firmados por Evainetos, Kimón, o Eukleidas, los visigodos prescinden del aspecto artístico para incidir solamente en la metrología y la ley del metal.

La producción artística mas propia y genuina visigoda es aquella relacionada con el metal. Incluso antes de su establecimiento en tierras del imperio, los visigodos eran famosos entre los romanos por su fabricación de objetos de orfebrería y joyería, valorándose de forma excepcional su originalidad decorativa y sus refinados procedimientos técnicos. Existió en el mundo godo un aprecio por la joya grande de colores vivos, inspirada en la opulencia de la indumentaria bizantina. Pocas veces se incorporan en las piezas que se conservan, piedras preciosas, pues generalmente serán semipreciosas, vidrios o simples pastas vitreas. Se busca, por el contrario, la riqueza a través de la policromía, creando un efecto de opulencia que es mas aparente que real, ya que las láminas que sirven de base suelen estar realizadas en oro de baja calidad, plata, o con frecuencia bronce. A pesar de que los materiales empleados no eran excesivamente costosos, estas alhajas adquieren un simbolo de prestigio imprescindible en el atuendo de aquellos que gozaban de un cierto status social.

Variante del número anterior por cambiar la letra I por E en EMERETA, (particularidad que Miles no fotografía aunque sí la cataloga) y por no llevar asterisco delante de la S de PIVS.

Si bien, como hemos dicho en el apartado anterior, las joyas visigodas buscaban mas el adorno que los metales preciosos para crear una falsa opulencia, no ocurría así en el campo de la numismática, en el cual predominaba el peso del oro por encima del aspecto estético. Difícilmente encontraremos un triente bajo el reinado de Sisebuto que no esté dentro del peso establecido por la ley.

La caída del Imperio Romano tiene lugar oficialmente en el año 476 cuando el último emperador de Occidente, Romulus Augustus, es depuesto por el general bárbaro Odoacro. Este acontecimiento puntual no es mas que el resultado final de un proceso de decadencia progresiva, anunciada ya desde mucho tiempo atrás a través de una paulatina infiltración de corriente germánica en el seno del mundo romano.

Los contactos entre Roma y los germanos tuvieron en un principio la base de los tratados y pactos del siglo III, gracias a los cuales el pueblo germano se asentó en territorio del imperio cultivando las tierras y prestando servicios militares. La inexistencia de una ruptura brusca entre ambas manifestaciones culturales, revestirá al alto medioevo de un matiz de legitimidad, como prolongación del bajo imperio.

Diversas particularidades hacen de este triente una pieza realmente rara. La X del final de la leyenda del anverso es una S invertida cruzada por una linea inclinada y está precedida por un confuso asterisco. También se omite la letra E de REX y la A de EMERETA, pero encima de todo, lo que nos llama con poderosa atención es el busto del anverso. Lejos de ser el clásico conocido formado por una linea ovalada partida en dos, con puntos en ambos espacios, éste tiene, por el contrario, aspecto de campana, con dos líneas verticales en su parte izquierda y cuatro en diagonal en su parte derecha. No se asemeja a ninguno acuñado en la ceca de Emerita. Tampoco encontramos similitud con los emitidos en otros talleres monetarios, ya sean de la provincia Narbonensis, Tarraconensis, Carthaginensis, Baetica, Lusitania, o Gallaecia. Asimismo, al no haber hallado ningún rey visigodo, ni anterior ni posterior a Sisebuto, que acuñase este tipo de busto, llegamos a la conclusión de que estamos ante una pieza inédita.

Miles describe el nombre del rey de dos formas diferentes según los trientes estudiados por él: SISEBVTVS ó SESEBVTVS, pero desconoce el que presentamos con la leyenda SESIBVTVS, error cometido por el abridor de cuño. Si bien es relativamente frecuente en la numismática visigoda cambiar una letra por otra, no lo es, sin embargo, intercambiar dos letras como en el caso de la presente moneda, pues donde debe ir la I se coloca la E y viceversa. Dicho caso de dislexia es muy infrecuente y da a este triente un punto de originalidad dentro de la extensa emisión de Sisebuto en la ceca de Emerita, una de las mas importantes en cuanto al volumen numerario del periodo visigodo.

El busto del reverso es mas pequeño y no separa la leyenda; similar a Miles lámina X nº 5. El mismo autor describe tres tipos de trientes acuñados en Emerita bajo Sisebuto: a). la leyenda del reverso esta dividida por las dos líneas que limitan el busto del monarca; b). al ser dicho busto mas pequeño, la leyenda es continua, sin separación; c). en el campo del reverso hay una cruz sobre escalones.

En otro apartado ya indicamos que los visigodos de origen germánico se establecieron en el siglo III en la Dacia, junto al mar Negro. Tras prolongados años como feudatarios de Roma, se trasladan a las Galias en el 412 y gracias a un pacto con el Imperio se asentaron en la provincia de Aquitania, fundando el Reino de Tolosa. Desde ahí, como tropas federadas de Roma, irrumpieron en el territorio hispánico para luchar contra vándalos, suevos y alanos, que habían invadido la península en el 409. Estas incursiones les permitieron apoderarse de plazas estratégicas y controlar las principales calzadas. Tras ser derrotados por los frances en la batalla de Vouillé (507), los visigodos serán expulsados del territorio galo, asentándose definitivamente en Hispania, y fijando como capital la ciudad de Toledo. Este es el punto de arranque, como nos dice N.Silva Santa-Cruz, de la monarquía visigoda como entidad política de dominio peninsular, reino que llegará a ser el mas poderoso de la Europa occidental.

Curioso triente por la gran separación que existe en el reverso entre la última letra y la cruz con la que se inicia la leyenda; el espacio es debido a que el grabador no ubicó bien las letras agrupándolas en exceso al principio y al final de la leyenda. Este error no suele ocurrir en los trientes acuñados por Sisebuto, pues precisamente se destacan por su uniformidad de estilo donde las letras ocupan su lugar, del mismo modo que en las artes los motivos florales o geométricos se disponen en torno a las pilas, capiteles, ánforas, cálices o sarcófagos, sin apenas crear espacios vacíos. La mejor prueba de lo dicho lo tenemos en las cancelas visigodas realizadas en piedra o en mármol, que servían para separar los distintos espacios en los templos y que acababan en arcos de medio punto o rematados en mitra, apoyados sobre columnas. Los motivos tallados en el interior de las mismas solían remitir al repertorio paleocristiano tradicional, con alegorías eucarísticas (racimos de uvas) o símbolos de la inmortalidad (pavos reales).

Miles que clasifica una moneda de Eminio variante de la presente por ser todas las letras que componen la palabra REX del mismo tamaño, no la ilustra, con lo que nos queda la duda de si también la O de IMIN \ddot{O} es de tamaño más reducido como la del presente triente. Esta pieza es similar a Heiss página 104 nº 6, lámina V.

Eminio o Imilio, pues conocemos ambas inscripciones en los trientes, es la actual Coimbra, ciudad portuguesa en la antigua provincia de Beira. Su distrito linda al norte con los de Aveiro y Vizeu, al este con los de La Guarda y Castello Branco, al sur con los de Leiria y al oeste con el océano Atlántico. La ciudad de Coimbra se encuentra a orillas del río Mondego y puede dividirse en dos partes, la alta de construcción antigua con callejuelas angostas y empinadas, y la baja formada por edificios modernos y calles anchas y rectas. Fue una población importante antes de ser conquistada por Roma, a la que llamaron Aeminio. También lo fue bajo los visigodos, como lo atestiguan las citas que de ella dan los Concilios de Braga.

Hasta la fecha se conocen seis monarcas que acuñaron en Eminio, Recaredo I, Liuva II, Witerico, Sisebuto, Suintila y Chintila, aunque no descartamos que con el tiempo aparezcan otros reyes, pues cuando Mateu y Llopis escribió su "Catálogo de las Monedas Previsigodas y Visigodas del Gabinete Numismático del Museo Arqueológico Nacional", tan solo se conocían cuatro: Recaredo, Liuva II, Sisebuto y Chintila.

Este triente es variante de los dos descritos en Miles por I en lugar de E en la cuarta letra que compone el nombre del rey: SISIBVTVS. Asimismo, también es variante de Campaner (ver página 562) donde la clasifica como inédita. Otra particularidad, no descrita en estos catálogos, la encontramos en la D de TUDE, que en este caso está invertida. El presente triente es el mismo que ilustra Chaves en página 90 nº 168.

Aunque la provincia Gallaecia es menor en extensión a las otras cuatro peninsulares, presenta por el contrario una extraordinaria cantidad de cecas, superior a la Tarragonensis, a la Lusitania, a la Carthaginensis y a la Baetica. Localidades pequeñas o caseríos sin importancia histórica batieron monedas, lo que nos recuerda los yacimientos auríferos de esta región, los cuales no son mencionados por los geógrafos antiguos, como si el monopolio de los explotadores romanos le obligaran a mantenerlo en secreto. De otro modo, es inexplicable que durante los siglos I y III acamparan innumerables legiones romanas, con un derroche de tal fuerza que ninguna sublevación justificaba.

Algunos autores aseguran que el Tuy actual (Prov. de Pontevedra) es el Tude antiguo; otros la sitúan en Lusitania; y también hay quien basándose en una donación de Alfonso VII a Santa María de Oya la ubican al norte del valle de Miñor.

Nos encontramos ante un triente rarísimo el cual falta en Miles, Heiss, Campaner, Pío Beltrán, Mateu y Llopis, etc. Tan solo se conocía el subastado en Basilea el 21-23 de enero de 1997 por la Société de Banque Suisse nº 2586, catalogada como pieza única. El presente es de arte superior a aquél y variante de leyenda y bustos. Éste se asemeja al dibujado por Miles en página 59 nº 5L, propios de Sisebuto acuñados en Lamego, Calapa, Laetera, Pincia y Semure. Solo el primero, Lamego, pertenece a Lusitania, los restantes entran en la provincia Gallaecia. En 1997 la numismática tenía constancia de que en esta ceca solo habían acuñado Recaredo I y Witerico.

Bergancia, es la actual Betanzos (Prov. de la Coruña) y la antigua Brigantium de los romanos y citada en el Itinerario Antonino, también llamada Flavium Brigantium, lugar donde se unían los caminos de Lugo y Braga para enlazar con el puerto de la Coruña. Sin embargo, Campaner y Pío Beltrán sostienen, gracias a ciertos documentos, que Bergancia no se refiere a la antigua población de Brigantium sino a Vergancia, diócesis de Bracara, cuya ubicación es la actual Braganza.. Los celtas la denominaban Celiobriga o Brigancia, pero bajo la dominación romana y por orden de Augusto, pasa a ser Juliobriga en honor de Julio Cesar. Los godos le restituyeron su nombre primitivo, hasta que los árabes en sus continuas luchas contra los cristianos, la saquearon varias veces quedando casi totalmente despoblada.

Campaner, Beltrán y Miles solo conocen el triente de Senabria acuñado bajo Suintila. También falta la presente pieza en los catálogos de monedas visigodas publicados más recientemente como el de M^a José y Rafael Chaves.

Estamos ante un triente inédito y posiblemente único cuyos bustos, sin ser exactamente los mismos, se asemejan al dibujado en Miles página 60 nº 5q.

Senabria es la actual Puebla de Sanabria (Prov. de Zamora) y diócesis de Astorga, antiguamente diócesis de Orense. Situada cerca de Portugal, en la carretera de Palencia a Santiago de Compostela, a 110 kilómetros de Zamora y a 80 de Benavente. Sus tierras muy escabrosas están regadas por los ríos Tera y Castro. Puebla de Sanabria tuvo importancia como plaza militar fronteriza, celebrándose en ella una histórica conferencia el 20 de junio de 1506 entre Fernando el Católico y Felipe el Hermoso, durante la cual el Cardenal Cisneros mantenía a distancia a los grandes que formaban la escolta del archiduque. Posteriormente, durante la Guerra de la Independencia, los españoles la recuperaron haciendo prisioneros a la guarnición, compuesta por suizos. Sanabria pertenecía, como ya hemos dicho, a la diócesis de Ourense según los documentos que especifican las comarcas o decanías encontrados por Pío Beltrán y que pueden agruparse en cuatro: 1º) División de los suevos; 2º) División de Wamba; 3º) Documento de la catedral, llamado el Magno; 4º) Documento de donación de Sancho II a la catedral. Tan solo en el documento 3º no encontramos a Sanabria dentro de la lista.

RECAREDO II (621)

Toledo

736 Triente. Anv.: *RECAREDYS FE Bustos de frente. Rev.: *TOLETO PIVSN Bustos de frente. 1,448 grs. Miles - . MBC. MUY RARA.

Dado el escaso periodo que reinó Recaredo II, tras la muerte de su padre Sisebuto en febrero del 621 y la elección de Suintila en marzo del mismo año, los numismáticos se preguntaron si realmente tuvo tiempo de acuñar monedas, y si lo hizo, cómo diferenciarlas de las de Recaredo I. Los magníficos trabajos de Alan Walker y Gonzalo Cores nos dan la solución. El primero con su publicación "The identification of the Coinage of Recaredo II : New evidence from the Visigothic Mints of Emerita and Eliberri". IAPN 1986, y el segundo con su artículo "Notas sobre las monedas de Recaredo II", en Numisma de Enero-Diciembre 1985-1986, páginas 39 a 43. Efectivamente, Recaredo II acuñó monedas por lo menos en las cecas de Emerita, Eliberri, Ispali, Barbi y Toledo. Veinte años separan de la muerte del primer Recaredo al nombramiento como rey del segundo. Por lo tanto, en este espacio de tiempo hay un cambio de arte que es el que nos dará la clave para poder distinguir ambos reyes. El proceso de evolución estilístico es casi imperceptible entre las últimas acuñaciones de un monarca y las primeras de su sucesor. Así pues, deduce Walker, si encontramos un Recaredo con un estilo más afín al de Sisebuto o Suintila habremos conseguido clasificar la moneda de Recaredo II. Por su parte, Cores siguiendo esta teoría, nos da a conocer la existencia de un triente de Toledo de Recaredo II cuyos cuños son semejantes a los de Sisebuto y sobre todo a los de Suintila. El presente triente es similar al fotografiado por Cores y clasificado como Recaredo II en la página 41.

Siguiendo la misma teoría desarrollada en el anterior apartado, podemos comprobar como los Recaredo I acuñados en Emerita (ver Miles lámina VI nº 6 al 14) son de diferente estilo al presente triente. Por el contrario, observamos una gran similitud con las piezas emitidas bajo Sisebuto (Ver Miles lámina X nº 2 al 5) y bajo Suintila (ver Miles lámina XV nº 14 y 15 y lámina XVI del nº 1 al 11), por lo que deducimos, sin margen de error, que esta moneda fue emitida por Recaredo II. Nadie pone hoy en duda que dicho monarca acuñó trientes, y menos cuando G.Cores descubrió el cuño de un reverso de Ispali compartido por Recaredo II y Suintila, obteniendo así una prueba objetiva imposible de rebatir.

La particularidad de este triente la vemos en el diseño de la letra E. Las tres que aparecen en la leyenda, están formadas por un palo vertical que tiene a su derecha tres triángulos colocados en posición paralela y que configuran los tres travesaños con los que se compone dicha letra.

Suintila fue uno de los generales de Sisebuto y subió al trono tras la muerte del joven Recaredo II. La primera parte de su reinado es generalmente elogiada, pero la segunda es unánimemente censurada. En efecto, en sus principios organizó la administración de justicia, socorriendo a los indigentes hasta el punto de ser llamado por San Isidoro "padre de los pobres". Expulsó definitivamente a los bizantinos en el 624 y continuó las luchas contra los vascones que volvían a asolar la Tarraconensis, provocando la sublevación de una parte importante del territorio visigodo. Un año después, asoció al trono a su hijo Ricimero, a su esposa Teodora y a su hermano Gelia. Sisenando, duque de Septimania, organizó una conspiración para apartarle del trono; entró victorioso en Zaragoza y obligó a huir a Suintila en el 631.

Aunque Miles no indica en su página 280 nº 223a, que la X de REX es de tamaño reducido, podemos apreciar en la lámina XI nº 13 como su ejemplar es similar al presente. Todos los trientes conocidos de Suintila acuñados en Toledo llevan al S de PIVS tumbada. Los bustos de anverso y reverso son similares y exponentes de esta ceca y reinado, dibujados por Miles en la página 58 nº 5e.

Variante del anterior por no llevar X al final de la leyenda del anverso y por el tamaño de las O, en reverso, mas pequeñas. Esta última particularidad no la tiene el triente ilustrado en Miles (ver lámina XII nº 3). La gran variedad de estilos, con que acuñó la ceca de Toledo a lo largo del periodo visigodo, nos da una cronología y tipología para el estudio de las labras en Hispania, pues desde Leovigildo a Rodrigo todos sus reyes emitieron monedas, demostrando así que era la capital del mundo hispano visigodo y sede principal de la Iglesia Católica. El verdadero circulante de la época post-Leovigildo se componía de oro propio visigodo y de bronce bizantino, aunque en algunos periodos también corrían piezas suevas, merovingias y de otros pueblos bárbaros.

La mayoría de trientes de Suintila acuñados en Barbi, llevan la N de SVIN THILA invertida, pues probablemente el catalogado por Mateu y Llopis y señalado en Miles nº 224i, con el dibujo del travesaño de la N en posición correcta, debe tratarse de un error. Este taller emitió monedas desde Sisebuto (612-621) a Tulga (639-642), excepto en los reinados de Iudila (631-633) y Chintila (636-639), aunque no se descarta que en un futuro próximo puedan aparecer piezas a nombre de este último.

La particularidad mas destacada de esta pieza está en los dos puntos que aparecen al final de la leyenda del reverso, variante ilustrada en Miles lámina XII nº 6. Ambos bustos representan el prototipo de los trientes acuñados por Suintila en las cecas, aparte de la presente Barbi, de Coleia, Córdoba, Elvora, Ispali, Mentesa, Saldania, Salmantia, Toletu y Tucci. El busto está formado por cuatro líneas paralelas dos a dos que se entrecruzan en ángulo recto, a veces mas abiertas, a veces menos. Esta similitud que tienen las cecas citadas nos demuestra de forma fechaciente, la unidad económica que existía entre ciertas provincias como la Baetica, (exceptuando Córdoba e Ispali) con la región sudoeste de la Carthaginensis.

Debido a la apretada distribución de la leyenda del anverso, la última letra E queda muy cerca del brazo izquierdo de la cruz, con lo que una lectura rápida nos puede hacer caer en el error de confundirla con una I seguida de dos puntos. Al observarla con mas atención, vemos que los dos puntos colocados arriba y en el centro son los travesaños de la E y el tercero, el de abajo, toca al brazo izquierdo muy abierto de la cruz, por lo que se llega a confundirse con ella.

La descripción de esta leyenda no corresponde con las dos variantes que apunta Miles, 225a y b., ninguna de ellas ilustradas. La primera porque invierte la N del anverso y la D del reverso es una P, y la segunda porque le falta la E en anverso y la primera O del reverso. En el dibujo de Heiss lámina V nº 7 también observamos la N retrógrada. Es curioso apreciar como la A clásica visigoda, sin el travesaño horizontal, aparece en el presente triente con éste, formando la A característica latina.

Por lo demás, los bustos corresponden a la ceca de Córdoba, en cuyo taller acuñaron todos los reyes visigodos excepto Liuva II, Witerico y Gundemaro, aunque dicha exclusión no es significativa, pues podría completarse en un futuro próximo dada la importancia de Córdoba y al no encontrar explicación histórica del por qué dichos monarcas no emitieron monedas en esta ceca.

Miles hace dos apartados en la ceca de Córdoba bajo Suintila, según sean los tipos de busto. El tipo a/. pertenecería al triente anterior, y el tipo b/. correspondería a la presente moneda, mas común no solo en esta ceca, sino también en la mayoría de los otros talleres que componen el numerario visigodo. Dejando de lado el estilo de los bustos, vemos otras particularidades muy puntuales adherentes a este tipo, como por ejemplo, la estrella, que no la cruz, con la que se inicia la leyenda del anverso. Pero, sobre todo, lo que da a la presente pieza una gran singularidad, es la sustitución de la letra D por la A visigoda en CORDOBA, pues, si usual es encontrar la letra griega delta ?, en lugar de la D (Miles 226a, b y d), no lo es en cambio verla sin el travesaño de la base.

- 747 Triente. Anv.: ⚡SVINTILA RE Busto de frente. Rev.: ⚡PIVS ELIBERRI: Busto de frente. 1,369 grs. Miles 227a. EBC. 425

Si bien por lo general hubo una decadencia de las antiguas ciudades romanas en la época visigoda, algunas, como la de la presente ceca, denotan un alto nivel tras un período de intensa ruralización. Con el paso del tiempo, ciertas ciudades cobraron gran importancia, donde la riqueza y la población se incrementan paulatinamente hasta la irrupción de los árabes en España. Las ciudades del litoral se beneficiaban más del comercio que las situadas en el interior. Algunas de estas últimas sufrieron la despoblación debido a las devastadoras plagas de la langosta, como Segobriga o Mentesa, antiguas sedes episcopales visigodas, que desaparecieron sin dejar rastro en tiempo de los musulmanes.

- 748 Triente. Anv.: ⚡SYINTILA RE Busto de frente. Rev.: ⚡PIVS ELIBERRI: Busto de frente. 1,450 grs. Miles 227e. EBC. 425

La caligrafía visigoda es muy curiosa, pues las letras se componen por lo general de palos abiertos en sus extremos, pero en alguna de ellas, como el del presente triente, la E del final de la leyenda del anverso está formada por un palo vertical seguido de dos puntos arriba y un tercero abajo y más adelantado, justo debajo del brazo izquierdo de la cruz. Por el contrario, en las dos E del reverso, los puntos se convierten en pequeños triángulos. También observamos en las dos R de RE (en anverso) y ELIBERI (en reverso) diferencias notables. La primera es una A con una coma o pestaña en su parte superior de la derecha. La del reverso se configura por un palo vertical más una coma a su derecha, sobre un triángulo, similar a la B de ELIBERI con la diferencia de que ésta cambia el triángulo por una segunda coma.

Presentamos aquí una nueva variante de puntuación de las muchas que existen en la ceca de Eliberri. Puntuación que, como ya indicamos en el párrafo anterior, cumple ciertas pautas de la caligrafía visigoda y que dificultan la lectura de la leyenda en el caso de que el observador no tenga suficiente experiencia para detectarlas. Dada la gran cantidad de cuños existentes, es de suponer que el abridor de éstos simplificaría su labor, bien por falta de tiempo, bien por vicios adquiridos, consiguiendo un resultado toscano, pero no exento de enorme interés.

Si bien en un principio el epitafio PIVS podría indicar alguna acción piadosa que eludiese a un concreto hecho histórico relacionado con la ciudad, más adelante debió quedar esteriotipado de su sentido estricto para formar parte de la leyenda, como así ocurre en una gran parte de las cecas visigodas.

- 750 Triente. Anv.: ⚡SVIITIL AR: Busto de frente y entre dos puntos. Rev.: ⚡PIVS ELIBEI• Busto de frente y entre dos puntos. 1,321 grs. Miles - . EBC. RARA. 600

Miles no clasifica ni ilustra ningún triente de Suintila en la ceca de Eliberri con un punto a ambos lados del busto de anverso y reverso. Curiosa pieza no solo por este detalle indicado, sino también por las irregularidades que presentan ambas leyendas.

Admitiendo, como ya confirmábamos anteriormente, que la población propiamente visigoda era muy inferior a la hispano romana y que no existió una fusión real de ambas culturas, es un hecho digno de ser observado que los hallazgos de monedas visigodas conocidas conste exclusivamente de trientes, es decir, no vemos en estos enterramientos ningún numerario romano, por lo que se deduce que la relación entre ambos pueblos era escasa por no decir nula. La causa de no existir más monedas godas que las de oro, tiene su explicación, según P. Beltrán, en la abundancia exorbitante de piezas de plata y cobre acuñadas en los tiempos del imperio romano, las cuales circulaban, sobre todo, entre la clase baja y el comercio de exportación. Veamos ahora lo que nos dice Mateu y Llopis: "Cuando el pueblo vencido (hispano romano) posee un sistema monetario multisecular, es éste el último aspecto en que se somete, y el vencedor (godos) acaba por reconocérselo, de una forma o de otra, por el interés que en ello le va".

En cada provincia se desarrolla un estilo propio aunque influenciado por las emisiones de las provincias vecinas. Así la Tarraconensis, la Carthaginensis, la Baetica, la Lusitania y la Gallaecia tuvieron un aire especial de representar al monarca, o mejor dicho, de representar el ropaje del rey, ya que las facciones de la cara, si se pueden llamar facciones, están absolutamente esquematizadas: una semicircunferencia dibuja la cabeza y el pelo, dos puntos los ojos, y otra semicircunferencia pero en sentido contrario a la anterior, la mandíbula.

En las piezas acuñadas por Suintila en Ispali, observamos como se añade una H (después de la letra T) en el nombre del rey, cosa que no ocurre en las emitidas en los talleres de Narbona, Acci, Eliberri, Salmantica, Aliobrio, Asturie, Cassavio, Fraucello, Georres, Leone, Nándolas, Pincia, Portocale, Semure, Senabria y Ventosa. En otros pueden darse ambos casos, es decir existen con H y sin ella, tales son Tarracona, Mentesa, Barbi, Córdoba, Tucci, Elvora, Emerita y Brácaro. Por último, apuntamos las cecas que emiten trientes siempre con la letra H, como es el caso de la presente Ispali, Calagorre, Cesaraugusta, Tirasona, Valentia, Saldania, Toleto, Asidona, Coleia, Egitania, Eminio, Calapa, Lucu y Tude.

En el mundo visigodo los miembros de una familia formaban comunidad entorno al padre y como nos dice Chaves, era una unidad económica, jurídica e incluso militar, convirtiéndose en una comunidad de derecho. Posteriormente se formaría la comunidad superior con sus propias instituciones dirigida por la Asamblea, la cual dictaba las normas de Gobierno en la persona elegida como jefe del pueblo. Pero según avanzando en su organización y contactos con los romanos, dichos jefes toman el título de rey, promoviendo leyes generales a todos sus súbditos.

Con el transcurrir de los años, el rey adquiere un poder absoluto sobre el ejército y la nobleza y solo está sometido a las leyes del reino, que por otro lado también las ha dictado él. Aunque la realeza en la época visigoda era electiva, se vió alterada en numerosas ocasiones al nombrar príncipes, o sea futuros reyes, a parientes cercanos a éste. Esta cadena que encauzaba la sucesión real también fue rota, en momentos puntuales, por los usurpadores. Los cortesanos (curiales), primados (primates) y grandes (próceres) formaban la corte junto a los condes, título dado a los empleados de palacio que desempeñaban los cargos de gran escudero, jefe de guardia, secretario de estado, intendente del patrimonio real, ministro de la guerra, de finanzas, de justicia, etc., etc.

Tucci ó Tuci, que se ha identificado con la actual Martos (Prov. de Jaén), posee unos tipos muy similares a los de la Carthaginensis. Plíneo la menciona con el nombre de Colonia Augusta Gemina Tuccitana. No hay que confundirla con la otra Tucci, también en la Baetica, apellidada Vetus y que se encontraba en el camino romano que iba de la desembocadura del Ana (Guadiana) a Mérida. Tucci fue sede episcopal y su fundación se remonta al siglo I, aunque solo se tiene constancia a partir del siguiente siglo III cuando el prelado Camerino, que goberna desde 296 hasta el 301, asistió al Concilio de Eliberri, como así consta su firma entre la de los padres de aquel Santo Concilio. Del último obispo que se tiene noticia antes de la invasión de los sarracenos, es de Sisebado, pero Tucci continuó gozando de cátedra pontificia y, por consiguiente, del libre ejercicio de su religión, como era frecuente entonces, según las capitulaciones pactadas con los conquistadores. Según H. Florez el honor de la sede pontificia duró hasta mediados del siglo VII, o sea, hasta la llegada de los almohades.

Los bustos acuñados en Tucci están formados por dos pirámides semi superpuestas con diversas rayas que las cruzan. Añadimos, a lo descrito en el apartado anterior, que el primer asentamiento del que se tienen noticias de Tucci es de la cultura de bronce, 2000 a 1500 A.C. y que abarcaba una horquilla que va de la Nava, Piedras de Cobos y el cortijo de Tafa; todos ellos en una zona de potencial agrícola a las orillas del arroyo Salado, incitan a pensar en el aprovechamiento de su componente salino de las aguas. Tucci es ya un importante centro ibérico cuando llegan los romanos y bajo Augusto alcanza el trato de inmune o exenta de pagar tributo a los conquistadores.

Bajo Suintila la ceca de Tucci acuña trientes con leyenda en el reverso IVSTVSTVCCI y PIVS TVCI o sea con los dos epitafios, aparte de VICTOR, que se añaden al nombre de la ceca. Es muy raro que bajo un mismo rey se den dos cuños diferentes en cuanto a su leyenda. No nos referimos a las variantes propias que conlleven la rotura de cuños, ni al cambio de estilo por los nuevos abridores de cuños, sino a distintos títulos como PIVS e IVSTVS con que se honra a la ciudad de Tucci. La etimología del nombre Tucci nadie la conoce, ni se explica satisfactoriamente, aunque acaso pueda derivar de la lengua hablada por los túrdulos.

El título dado por los romanos y ya indicado anteriormente, de Colonia Augusta Gemina (gemela) podría deberse a la proximidad de la antigua aldea Tosiria (Torredonjimeno) con Martos, pues ambas tuvieron entre los romanos la condición de colonia, por lo que algunos historiadores creen que constituyeron una sola llamada Gemina. Aquí debemos descartar la teoría del Padre Florez que sostiene que se le denominaba así al ser integrada por soldados de la legión "decima gemina", pues está demostrado que, en los días de Octavio Augusto en que se fundó la colonia, aquella legión no estuvo en Hispania.

El nombre de Martos, con que se conoce desde la edad media a Tucci, es atribuido por algunos a la circunstancia de haber sido arrebatada a los moros por San Fernando el día de santa Marta, y por otros, al hecho de haber estado la antigua Tucci consagrada a Marte. Sea como fuere, Martos se constituyó como una de las defensas de Jaén en el siglo XI. Su estructura en época árabe no era diferente del resto de las ciudades islámicas. El núcleo principal llamado Medina, encerraba la mezquita mayor, que en Martos se levantaba donde antes había estado el templo de Hércules.

Elvora, llamada primitivamente Ebora, es de origen celtíbero. Fue municipio de antiguo derecho latino y adquirió gran importancia mercantil. Durante la dominación árabe llevó el nombre de Yeborah y estuvo sujeta a las aftas o aftanidas, príncipes de Badajoz. Hoy en día aún pueden apreciarse los restos de la muralla, así como algunas torres construidas por los godos, pero por encima de todo, hay que citar el templo romano que data del siglo II ó III de nuestra era y que es sin duda, el más completo de la Península Ibérica. Por ello, y por los más de treinta y seis monumentos nacionales, ha recibido la especial protección de la UNESCO como Patrimonio de la Humanidad. Desde que Geraldo Sem Pavor se la arrebató al poder sarraceno en 1165, Evora se convirtió en la residencia habitual de los monarcas portugueses. La Villa vivió después una lenta decadencia motivada por la ascensión al trono portugués del rey español Felipe II. A partir de entonces la corte prefirió vivir más cerca de Lisboa, por lo que la universidad se cerró y Evora quedó confinada a una existencia puramente rural, convertida en el centro comercial de la provincia.

Desde Leovigildo, Emerita acuña ininterrumpidamente bajo todos los monarcas visigodos, con lo que nos demuestra que era lugar de transacciones mercantiles y uno de los centros mas importantes del medioevo. Los mercaderes bizantinos remontaban el Guadiana hasta llegar a Emerita, donde existia "una especie de caja de préstamos" (Mateu y Llopis página 349) fundada por el obispo de esta ciudad. Masona, gracias a la buena comunicación de sus diversas vías que harian de Emerita un punto imprescindible para la compra y venta de productos.

Emerita ya fue la capital de la Lusitania en la época de Augusto, cuando decide asentar a los soldados veteranos de las legiones V y X, en el año 25 A.C., en esta población conocida entonces por Emerita Augusta. Desde entonces y hasta la caída del imperio romano de occidente, Mérida será un importantísimo centro jurídico, económico, militar y cultural. La llegada de los árabes a la península y la pronta ocupación de la capital Emerita por las tropas de Muza, traerá consigo el declive de la ciudad, en comparación con etapas anteriores. A principio del siglo XIII, en 1230, Alfonso IX conquistará la ciudad, pero no será hasta la época de los Reyes Católicos cuando Emerita inicie una recuperación política, motivada por el apoyo del Maestre de Santiago don Alfonso de Cárdenas, defensor de la causa de Isabel en su lucha por la corona con Juana la Beltraneja. Desgraciadamente, por su situación fronteriza con Portugal, se verá envuelta en continuas refriegas y batallas en época de los Austrias y Borbones, sin ningún beneficio político ni económico. La invasión francesa supuso para Mérida una lamentable pérdida de su patrimonio histórico artístico, así como el parón económico que se inició a finales del siglo XVIII.

El busto del principe o sucesor (reverso) está representado en Miles página 61 nº 7 y es parecido a las emisiones emeritenses de los monarcas anteriormente citados, es decir, con una indumentaria larga y estrecha cuyos caracteres se acentuarán durante los reinados sucesivos.

De la diócesis de Bracara se conocen las localidades con taller monetario de Bergancia o Bregancia, Palantucio y Laetera, además de la capital que acuñó durante Leovigildo, Witerico, Suinthila, Chindasvinto, Recesvinto, Egica y Witiza. Bracara se denominaba Bracara Augusta en época del imperio romano. Probablemente deriva tal denominación de los "bracarios", tribu celta establecida en el territorio que actualmente ocupa la ciudad de Braga, hacia el siglo IV D.C. Su historia está ligada a la de Portugal desde que el Conde de Borgoña la unió a aquel reino, para regular los impuestos y contribución de guerra. En Bracara se celebraron varios concilios. Como región fronteriza, emite dos tipos de monedas, el gallego y el lusitano. El primero lo vemos, por ejemplo, en los trientes de Witerico y el segundo en los de Chindasvinto.

Miles desconoce esta ceca bajo el reino de Suinthila. Tampoco la cita el Prontuario de la Moneda Hispano Visigoda de Álvarez Burgos. M^a José y Rafael Chaves ilustran un triente con el nº 208, el cual es variante del presente por leyenda y busto del anverso.

Tude, la actual Tuy (Prov. de Pontevedra), no se sabe a ciencia cierta su origen. Según la leyenda, el nombre primitivo de Tyde o Tude viene de su fundador Diomedes, hijo de Tideo y rey de Etolia, que vagabó por aquellos mares después de la caída de Troya. Parece probable que Tude fuera, al igual que otras poblaciones de Galicia, colonizada por griegos. Durante el periodo romano perteneció al convento jurídico de Bracara. Si bien el poblado parece haber estado situado desde un principio en la cumbre del monte Aloya, se trasladó a la base en tiempos de los godos. Egica y Witiza residieron en Tude en el momento mas álgido de esta localidad. Tras la caída en poder de los musulmanes, es reconquistada por Alfonso I, aunque será en tiempo de Alfonso VII cuando Tude se agregará a los dominios castellanos.

La ceca de Tude acuña en época de Recaredo con leyenda "Victoria in Tude" y "Tude Pius". En el presente triente vemos que se le otorga el título IVSTVS. En Acta Numismática nº 11 (1981) A. Domingo Soriano redacta un artículo sobre un triente de Suinthila acuñado en Tude: "Hasta la aparición de esta pieza no había constancia numismática de que el taller galaico de Tude hubiese batido moneda en el reinado de Suinthila", y a continuación describe la susodicha moneda, que es la misma que enumera Chaves, ya citada al principio de este apartado. A pesar de la gran cantidad de talleres monetarios encontrados en Gallaecia, con respecto a las demás provincias visigodas, sus monedas son extraordinariamente escasas, incluso para aquellas cecas de mayor importancia y por lo tanto rarísimas en las secundarias, como es el caso de Tude.

Si se compara este triente con el ilustrado en Miles lámina XVII nº 1 se comprobará que son muy distintos, no solo en las variantes de leyenda, sino, también, en el estilo de los bustos. Carles Tolrà, en su lámina 22 nº 1012, también fotografía una pieza más similar a la de Miles que a la presente. Así mismo es variante de la descrita en Campaner página 215 y del dibujo de Botet i Sisó en su Geografía General de Cataluña, dirigida por F. Carreras y Candi, página 224. En todas las bibliografías vemos, pues, que la segunda S de IVSTVS está tumbada, cosa que no ocurre en el presente triente, el cual es similar al publicado por Rafael y Mª José Chaves en Numisma Enero-Junio 1992, página 60 nº 47.

Gerunda es la actual Girona, en cuya provincia se establecieron colonias griegas en Ampurias y Rosas hacia los años 550 A.C. Por entonces, los naturales, a quien los griegos llamaron iberos, estaban organizados en estados o regiones. Se conoce la existencia de los indiketas que ocupaban el Ampurdán y que lindaban con los keretanos, ausetanos y laietanos. Gracias a su estratégica posición, en la misma Vía Augusta, los romanos establecieron una fortificación llamada Gerunda hacia los años 75 y 76 D.C. Tras la caída del imperio romano, Gerunda pasó a depender de los monarcas visigodos hasta el 711 que fue sometida por los árabes. En el 785 Carlomagno creó el condado de Girona, núcleo inicial de la Marca Hispánica y posteriormente, en el 878, el conde Guifredo I unificó los condados de Barcelona y Girona.

La conjura respaldada por el rey franco Dagoberto motivó la subida al trono de Sisenando, tras acabar con la vida de Suinila y su hijo Recimero. El ejército franco procedente de Toulouse llegó a Zaragoza para proclamar rey a Sisenando, el cual consiguió también que fuese reconocido como tal por la iglesia en el IV Concilio de Toledo. De esta manera la iglesia y la nobleza demostraban su fuerza frente al fortalecimiento monárquico que se venía produciendo en reinados anteriores. Como consecuencia de dicho Concilio de Toledo (623), la Asamblea conciliar tuvo por primera vez la posibilidad de inmiscuirse en los asuntos del Estado puramente civiles. Los eclesiásticos se afanaron por evitar nuevos actos de violencia que debilitaban el poder real y, por ende, al propio reino visigodo. El rey sería elegido por la nobleza y la iglesia, recibiendo la unción de esta última. Así se ponía de manifiesto quien eran los poderes fácticos en la monarquía visigoda, en detrimento del poder real. Sisenando falleció de muerte natural en el 636.

Es en la ceca de Ispali bajo Sisenando donde se conocen más variantes de leyendas, ya sea en diversas puntuaciones, ya sea en letras retrógradas. También podemos encontrarnos que en un mismo triente hallemos idéntica letra con distinta caligrafía, como el presente, pues las dos E, que aparecen en la leyenda del anverso, son completamente diferentes. La primera es la usual, mientras que la segunda se compone de un palo con tres puntos a su derecha, posiblemente por falta de espacio. Revisadas las ilustraciones de Miles, llegamos a la conclusión que la presente moneda es variante de todas ellas. Los visigodos no se dispersaron uniformemente por toda la península. Asentados en áreas de gran extensión, dejaban las actividades artesanales y mercantiles a los hispano romanos, muy superiores en número, que seguían manteniendo sus curias municipales y su administración tradicional. De ello se deduce que la población autóctona pagaba impuestos a los godos, mientras éstos, grandes terratenientes, gozaron de importantes exenciones fiscales.

Como ya indicamos en distintos apartados, los visigodos eran una pequeña minoría dentro del conjunto de la población. Su civilización estaba menos desarrollada que la romana, y aun cuando algunos vivían en las ciudades, no hubo un tipo de ésta específicamente visigoda, pues eran las mismas antiguas metrópolis romanas en plena decadencia, ya iniciada durante el bajo imperio. Chintila subió al poder a la edad de ochenta y seis años, sin que se sepa a ciencia cierta su vida anterior ni por qué fue elegido. Elección algo difícil, pues los magnates y obispos en la asamblea reunida para nombrar nuevo monarca, pusieron de manifiesto sus diferencias y rivalidades llegando a él gracias a que el clero acogió favorablemente la candidatura de Chintila. El rey, con el apoyo de los obispos, ejerció una autoridad indiscutible y poco antes de su muerte consiguió que los prelados y príncipes admitieran como sucesor a su hijo Tulga, logrando así que siguiera el principio hereditario en la monarquía goda.

Existen dos teorías sobre la subida al trono de Chindasvinto, una la respalda Sigiberto Glembacense, quien sostiene que el viejo conspirador de setenta y nueve años decidió arriesgarse con el apoyo de la nobleza y se proclamó rey presentándose en Toledo para derrocar a Tulga. La otra teoría la presenta San Idelfonso: Tal rebelión no prosperó, pues Chindasvinto no tenía la adhesión de la iglesia, y tuvo que esperar la muerte de Tulga, acaecida poco tiempo después, para ser reconocido como nuevo rey, gracias esta vez al respaldo del clero, aunque seguramente a regañadientes. Fuera como fuese, lo cierto es que si bien su antecesor (Tulga) ocupó el trono respaldado por la iglesia, Chindasvinto lo consiguió por el fuerte apoyo de la nobleza.

Las primeras medidas adoptadas por Chindasvinto fueron encaminadas a castigar con rigor a todos los que se habían sublevado contra la autoridad real en los reinados anteriores. Algunos autores sostienen que el número de las personas que condenó a muerte pasaron de setecientas, entre ellas más de doscientos miembros de la nobleza, con lo que logró pacificar sus reinos y asentar sólidamente la monarquía visigoda, ya decadente, devolviéndole su fuerza perdida. Una vez solucionado este problema, se granteó el amor del pueblo con la prudencia y observancia de las leyes godas. En el quinto año de su reinado se celebró el VII Concilio de Toledo, el cual impuso la pena de excomunión a cuantos fueran traidores al rey o a la patria. Casó con Riceberga, cuando ésta no contaba más de dieciséis años; se sabe que su esposa falleció siete años después habiéndole dado dos hijos y una hija: Recesvinto fue su sucesor en el trono, Teodofredo fue padre del último rey don Rodrigo y Favila madre de don Pelayo, el restaurador de la monarquía cristiana.

En el reinado de Recesvinto nos encontramos con un nuevo diseño de triente. Se desecha el tipo hasta entonces imperante y que se caracterizaba por bustos de frente en ambas caras de la moneda, para pasar al busto de perfil en el anverso y cruz sobre peldaños en el reverso, similares a las piezas acuñadas en la primera época de Leovigildo. No atinamos a dar una explicación lógica de este cambio, pues después de setenta años manteniendo el tipo de ambos bustos de frente, es de suponer que el comercio y el pueblo se habían ya acostumbrado a él. Quizás se debiera al afán del rey para obtener el apoyo de la iglesia el que colocara en las monedas la cruz, símbolo del cristianismo. Lo cierto es que cuando Recesvinto asume, solo, el poder, se aprecia un aumento en la variedad tipológica de los trientes. También bajo su mandato, según Grierson, vuelve la ley de 18 quilates instaurada por Leovigildo, aunque lo corriente es de 16. En cuanto al peso, sigue inalterable a pesar de apreciarse alguna disminución en cecas secundarias, acaso por la debilidad de la corona.

El diseño del busto del presente triente es muy peculiar y no hemos podido encontrar otro similar en las ilustraciones o dibujos de las bibliografías especializadas en monedas visigodas; quizás el que se asemeja más es el de Miles lámina XXVI nº 4.

Con este triente se puede apreciar que Recesvinto quiso restaurar el tipo diseñado más de medio siglo antes por Leovigildo. Basta comparar los dibujos de la página 259 del "Catálogo de las Monedas Previsigodas y Visigodas del Gabinete Numismático del Museo Arqueológico Nacional", para constatar lo dicho. El resultado sin embargo es mucho más tosco, pues se aprecia en él la decadencia en que el mundo visigodo ya empezaba a deslizarse.

Recesvinto desde muy joven dió pruebas de una capacidad nada común, lo mismo en la guerra que en los negocios públicos, por lo que su padre Chindasvinto decidió asociarlo al trono, hecho que ocurrió el 21 de enero del 649. Tal nombramiento fue ratificado unánimemente por la nobleza. Su padre se retiró de la vida pública y tras su muerte en el año 653, Recesvinto queda como rey único con el consentimiento del clero y los magnates.

Froya, uno de los poderosos nobles, se declaró en rebelión contra Recesvinto y se refugió en Aquitania junto a unos vascones con el fin de formar un partido. Reunió un numeroso ejército y, desbastando todo a su paso, llegó hasta Zaragoza. Allí, el rey le hizo frente y le infrigió una severa derrota. Una vez castigado el culpable, Recesvinto quiso conocer la causa del descontento de los sublevados, los cuales manifestaron que se debía al excesivo tributo que pesaba sobre ellos. El rey prometió atender sus quejas convocando el Concilio de Toledo en diciembre del 653 y del cual salieron diversas leyes que mitigaron en parte las severas disposiciones dadas por su padre Chindasvinto, así como los acuerdos adoptados referentes a la elección de los reyes; también se estableció una comunidad legislativa para los godos e hispano romanos, permitiendo, además, el matrimonio entre personas de las dos razas, que hasta entonces estaba prohibido.

Este triente es variante de busto de los ilustrados en Miles, lámina XXVIII 1 al 8. Los rasgos son muy esquemáticos y caricaturescos, por el contrario las letras de las leyendas están bien dibujadas y no plantean problema alguno en su lectura. Recesvinto llevó a cabo la división y el deslinde de los obispados. Es notable el hecho de que el monarca mantuviera alejados del poder a sus hermanos y parientes, sin duda para evitar que pudiesen ejercer influencia, pues se había acordado, por lo que se refiere a la sucesión del rey, que al morir el soberano se procediera a la elección del nuevo monarca, en el mismo lugar de su muerte, por los obispos y magnates y sin influencias familiares. Recesvinto falleció el 1º de octubre del año 672, siendo enterrado en la iglesia de Santa María que él mismo mandó construir. Por orden de Alfonso X se mandaron trasladar sus restos mortales a Toledo.

El busto que vemos en el anverso de este triente acuñado en Tarraco es originalísimo, pues no pudimos encontrarlo ni en nuestro fichero particular, ni en los libros de moneda visigoda. De hecho no tiene busto, pues el cuello surge de una línea horizontal. El pelo está formado por cuatro rayas en dirección hacia arriba y que parten del cogote. Solo hay que compararlo con el ilustrado en Chaves nº 302 o en Miles lámina XXVIII nº 12 para ver su enorme diferencia de estilo. A la muerte de Recesvinto se reunieron en Gérticos, conforme a lo acordado en el Concilio Toledano de 653, los obispos y nobles para nombrar nuevo rey. La elección recayó en un anciano de noble alcurnia llamado Wamba y aunque en un principio éste se negó a empuñar el cetro, cosa por aquella época totalmente inaudita, al final cede ante los ruegos y fue ungido rey en Toledo el 20 de octubre de 672. Apenas coronado, no tardaron en levantarse los vascones, como tenían por costumbre al advenimiento al trono de un nuevo monarca. Así mismo, Hilderico, conde de Nimes, encabezaba otra rebelión fraguada en Septimania. El rey envió al general Flavio Paula para hacerles frente y él en persona se dirigió contra los vascones a quienes sometió. Pero Flavio Paula con la ayuda del duque de Tarragona Ranosoindo se apoderó de Narbona y entró en Nimes, proclamándose rey. Sabedor Wamba de lo acaecido, tomó por asalto la ciudad de Nimes, condenando al sublevado Paula a cadena perpetua.

A raíz de la sublevación citada en el anterior apartado Wamba, convencido de que la corrupción invadia el país y que las órdenes de reclutamiento no se cumplían por la desidia de los encargados de fiscalizarlas, quiso poner remedio resucitando las antiguas virtudes militares de los godos y dictando reglas que le permitieran reunir en momentos determinados un numeroso ejército. Todo el que no acudiera al llamamiento debía recibir doscientos azotes y pagar un triente al rey. Gracias a estas medidas, pudo obtener una memorable victoria contra los sarracenos, que por primera vez intentaban desembarcar en las costas de Andalucía. En 675 se celebraron dos Concilios, uno en Toledo y otro en Braga. El presente triente tiene la particularidad de llevar en la leyenda del reverso un asterisco ó estrella al principio, y una espiga o rama al final. El busto es similar a los acuñados por Ervigio y Egica en Ispali y representado en Miles en la página 55 nº 2b.

Es variante de Miles por distinto busto (ver lámina XXIX nº 13). En la presente pieza los labios están dibujados por dos puntos en lugar de la clásica línea. También es muy curiosa la marca que vemos al final de la leyenda del reverso y que hemos descrito como una rama.

Menos en Gallaecia, Wamba emite monedas en las restantes cuatro provincias, pues hasta el día de hoy se conocen trientes acuñados en Córdoba e Ispali (Baetica), Tarraco (Tarragonensis), Toleto (Carthaginensis) y Emerita (Lusitania) aunque esto no es óbice para que en un futuro próximo puedan aparecer nuevas cecas. Aun así, se puede apreciar, a simple vista, una reducción de talleres monetarios en la época de Wamba, sin que conozcamos a ciencia cierta la causa de ello.

En este triente podemos apreciar el nuevo tipo de anverso, donde el monarca sostiene el cetro surmontado de cruz, tipo que inició Wamba en la ceca de Toledo, y que finalizará con Egica.

Ervigio, que era de origen bizantino, fue admitido por Wamba y vivió en palacio. Pero, según varios historiadores, para satisfacer su ambición de poder dió a Wamba una bebida soporífera que le hizo caer en un estado agonizante, lo que aprovechó para tonsurarlo y vestirle con los hábitos de fraile. Al recobrar el conocimiento, Wamba abdicó y se retiró al monasterio de Pampliega, cerca de Burgos. Dicha historia no es aceptada por todos los estudiosos, como por ejemplo Masdeu, que lo pone en duda. Lo cierto es que Ervigio convocó el XII Concilio Toledano, y presenta los tres documentos siguientes: 1º) Acta firmada por los oficiales de palacio en la que consta que Wamba, opta por la tonsura y el hábito de penitente. 2º) Abdicación voluntaria de Wamba en la persona de Ervigio. 3º) Carta de Wamba al obispo, en la cual recomienda la unción del nuevo rey. Temeroso de las consecuencias, o tal vez arrepentido de ellas, Ervigio convocó el XIII Concilio Toledano (683), en el que se aprobó, entre otras cosas, las siguientes leyes: los cómplices de las rebeliones en época de Wamba y Chintila fueron amnistiados, reintegrándoles la posesión de sus bienes. A los familiares de Ervigio se les declararon inviolables, pero se disponía que las viudas reales no pudieran, bajo pena de excomunión, contraer segundas nupcias, aunque fuera con otro rey. Se condonaron todos los tributos durante el primer año del reinado de Ervigio. Se dispuso que el monarca no podría condenar ni encarcelar a los obispos, sin que antes fueran juzgados por una junta de prelados y nobles.

En el presente triente vemos en el anverso una nueva innovación. Según algunos autores ven la cabeza de Cristo nimbada, en lugar del emperador. Transcribimos a continuación lo que nos dice Felipe Mateu y Llopis en su obra "La Moneda Española" página 93. "El nimbo y la corona radiada muy usada en la antigüedad, fueron adoptados por algunos emperadores romanos, pero desde el cristianismo quedó como atributo exclusivo de Cristo, de la Virgen, de los Santos..." y mas adelante añade: "(Ervigio) buscó el apoyo de la iglesia; el canon 2 del Concilio XIII es, igualmente, manifestación del afán del rey por atraerse a la nobleza eclesiástica y laica, y sus leyes judaicas fueron terminantes, pretendiendo con ellas granjearse al pueblo, que no veía con buenos ojos a los hebreos. Con todas estas circunstancias que concurren en la persona del rey están de acuerdo los tipos monetarios. Ervigio, bizantino de origen, adopta para el anverso de sus monedas la imagen de Cristo, con el nimbo al estilo de Bizancio, manifestación de Catolicismo, frente a judíos, y devoción a la Iglesia, de la que fue sumiso."

Presentamos aquí, el triente más raro de toda esta serie. Hasta la publicación del artículo de Grierson en Acta Numismática 21 - 23, 1991 - 1993, página 329, se sabía que Ervigio solo había acuñado en Narbona, Cesaraugusta, Tarraco, Toledo, Córdoba, Eliberri, Ispali, Tucci, Egitania, Elvora, Emerita y Salmantica. Nadie nombraba a Carmona. Es mas, se desconocía que esta población tuviera taller monetario en la época visigoda, pues tampoco bajo los otros reinados de este periodo aparece la ceca de Carmona. El hallazgo presente es el que hace de la Numismática una ciencia viva, llena de sorpresas. A continuación pasamos a transcribir los puntos mas importantes de dicho artículo de Grierson: "El triente de Carmona ha sido adquirido recientemente por el Museo Fitzwilliam, Cambridge. Fue ofrecido por la firma A. H. Baldwin & Son de Londres en septiembre de 1993, nº 45, pero atribuido a Narbona. Esto es un error ya que aparte de que la leyenda es Karmona, no Narbona, la última ceca en esa época usaba bustos de perfil, no de frente. El busto de frente es el tipo de Sevilla (Miles 11n), y la utilización de una delta griega en lugar de una D latina en la fórmula IDNM (IN DEI NOMINE), se limita a Sevilla. Las monedas de Sevilla también llevan una estrella al inicio de la leyenda del reverso, y una variante (Miles 410) tiene la característica inusual de tres puntos debajo de los peldaños que sostienen la cruz."

Respecto a su nombre antiguo Carmo o Carmone, no puede asegurarse nada en concreto. Según algunos historiadores es de origen fenicio y según otros lo hacen derivar de "Carm", casa de recreo. Incluso existe la teoría de que viene de "Car-Hamon", ciudad de Hammon divinidad venerada en Cartago. Por ultimo Humbolt le atribuye origen ibérico, haciendo derivar el nombre de Carmo de "Car", partícula inicial que indica altura, y "men", "maen", "mon", fuerza, siendo su significado el de "colina fuerte". Durante la época ibérica tuvo tanta importancia que se concedió el derecho de acuñar moneda. Cesar la prefería a otras ciudades por su posición y fortaleza dejando constancia de ello en su obra "De bello civili", en la que la describe como la mas firme y la mayor de todas las poblaciones de la Baetica. Su importancia no disminuyó cuando pasó a ser dominada por los godos primero, y los árabes después. En 1247 el rey Fernando III se apoderó de la ciudad repoblándola de cristianos y convirtiendo además la mezquita en iglesia católica.

Este tipo de busto, con cruz sobre la cabeza, se inicia en el reinado de Ervigio en la ceca de Córdoba, para continuar con Egica en el taller monetario de Mentesa. Ninguna otra casa de la moneda, ni ningún otro rey, volverán a reproducirlo. Está formado por una circunferencia (cara), dentro de la cual vemos dos puntos (ojos), y en medio de ellos una línea recta (nariz); dos pequeñas semicircunferencias hacen a la vez de orejas. Es difícil encontrar un dibujo más simple e infantil que el presente. En cuanto a la leyenda, observamos que las cuatro primeras siglas IDNM, cuya traducción es IN DEI NOMINE, ya las utilizan anteriores monarcas.

Egica fue designado sucesor a la corona por su suegro Ervigio, que le había dado su hija Cixilona en matrimonio, con la condición de que protegiese a su familia. Muerto Ervigio, Egica no cumplió lo pactado, pues habiendo sido muchos nobles desposeídos de sus tierras por el anterior rey, ahora exigían la devolución de ellas. Egica convocó el XV Concilio de Toledo para que los obispos le dijeran qué juramento, de los dos que había hecho, tenía que cumplir: el de proteger a la familia de su antecesor o el de hacer justicia a sus súbditos. El resultado fue repudiar a su esposa y perseguir a los parientes del difunto monarca, enfrentándose así con la alta nobleza.

Quizás fue Egica quien acuñó más tipos de bustos diferentes de todos los monarcas visigodos. Por ejemplo, el presente triente nada tiene que ver con el emitido en Tarraco, Toledo, Narbona, Cesaraugusta, Emerita, Córdoba, Acci, etc. Incluso podemos observar diversos tipos en una misma ceca como Toledo, Emerita, Córdoba e Ispali. En cuanto al busto visto de frente también es prolífico en diversos estilos muy diferenciados como Mentesa, Eliberri, Salmantica, Emerita, Toledo, Ispali, etc.

Como ya dijimos en el apartado anterior, Egica repudiaba a su mujer al subir al trono. El arzobispo de Toledo, Sisiberto, conspira, junto a miembros de la nobleza laica y eclesiástica, contra el rey para colocar en el trono a algún pariente de Ervigio. Descubierta la trama, Egica convoca el XVI Concilio Toledano, en donde la iglesia depuso al arzobispo privándole de todas las dignidades, excomulgándole y exiliándolo a perpetuidad. A raíz de este Concilio se refuerza la posición de Egica como rey, en contra de una disminución del poder de la nobleza y el clero. A los que fueron desleales les confiscó sus bienes pasando a incrementar su patrimonio y el de sus adeptos. Estas medidas aumentaron la tensión social.

La asociación al trono de Egica junto a su hijo Witiza dió lugar a la acuñación de trientes a nombre de ambos reyes durante cinco años. Egica, de edad avanzada, se aseguró así la sucesión de su dinastía. En este triente vemos los nombres en el anverso de Egica y en el reverso de Witiza, pero solo un busto, el del padre, muy similar al dibujado en Miles página 63 nº 11b, y que ya había acuñado su antecesor Ervigio en Córdoba, Elvora y Emerita. Posteriormente también acuñará uno parecido su hijo Witiza en Mentesa y Córdoba.

Veamos que nos dice ahora Felipe Mateu y Llopis en su obra dedicada al Gabinete Numismático del Museo Arqueológico Nacional, página 131: "Nada mas elocuente, en cuanto a la ley o título de las monedas visigodas, que el examen comparativo de las acuñaciones de reyes, distantes entre si, por ejemplo Recaredo I y Egica-Witiza. Así como la talla se conserva, la ley no, y cada vez va siendo mayor la cantidad de plata que entra en la liga hasta llegar a emisiones casi o exclusivamente de plata." Y añade unas líneas mas adelante: "La razón de ser de las monedas de oro muy pálido obedece a causas económicas. Los visigodos al acuñar oro de buena ley y aleado con plata, realizaban una sencilla aleación binaria que solidificaba cristales mixtos de la misma especie. La coloración del resultante se aproxima mas o menos al color del oro o de la plata, según la dosificación de estos metales en la mezcla".

La experiencia nos dice que en el campo del anverso hay dos bustos afrontados, pues de hecho su dibujo es casi irreconocible por su simplicidad. Este tipo de bustos solo lo vemos en el período de Egica y Witiza en las cecas de Narbona, Tarraco, Barcino, Gerunda, Cesaraugusta, Tucci, Toleto, Valentia, Córdoba, Egabro, Eliberri, Ispali, Egitania, Elvora, Bracara, Salmantica, Emerita y la presente Mentesa. Aunque por regla general los trientes de ésta época descienden de peso, el presente, por lo contrario, se mantiene dentro de lo establecido por la ley.

Egica permanece en Toledo, mientras su hijo Witiza se traslada a Tuy convirtiéndola en residencia real y encargándose del gobierno de Gallaecia. Durante este corto período de cinco años hubo, según algunos historiadores, ciertos desembarcos de los sarracenos en las costas de la península, como preludio a la gran invasión que posteriormente padecerá Hispania.

La situación de la Hacienda Pública bajo Witiza fue tan mala que los trientes tuvieron que disminuir en peso y ley, hasta convertirse prácticamente, en según qué caso, en meras piezas de plata. Las monedas de esta época distan mucho de ser de oro, como ocurría en los tiempos de Recaredo o Sisebuto.

Recordemos que según el historiador Menéndez y Pelayo, Witiza fue acusado de tirano y opresor de su pueblo, de lujurioso y cismático y bajo su reinado se confirmó la decadencia y ruina del imperio. Mas adelante llega a decir: "Witiza derriba los muros de las ciudades y convierte las armas en arados, no por amor a las artes de la paz, sino para impedir o provocar sublevaciones contra su tiránico dominio". Efectivamente, a excepción de las plazas que dependían de Toledo, León y Astorga, demolió las otras fortalezas, al objeto de que los posibles sublevados no encontraran amparo en ellas.

Una pieza similar se ilustra en Miles lámina XXXVI nº 2.

Aquella poderosa monarquía se vino a tierra en muy pocos años. Las diferencias radicales que separaban aún los dos elementos, el germano y el hispano romano, se acentúan más con Witiza. La población autóctona hubiera podido resistir el puñado de árabes que cruzó el estrecho de Gibraltar, pero como ya hemos explicado en el anterior apartado, el rey les había desarmado, demolidas las torres, y las lanzas convertidas en rastrillos. Estos últimos tiempos de la monarquía visigoda nos ofrece un panorama adecuado a la economía y concretamente a la situación monetaria, que desvela cuán lejos se encontraba ahora el triente de tener aquella ley de las piezas de imitación bizantinas o de la propia divisa nacional hispana, durante los reinados que van de Leovigildo a Ervigio.

Si la opinión de los historiadores sobre Egica no va siempre acorde, por el contrario, el juicio que les merece Witiza es unánime. Sobre el primero, hay quien sostiene que fue un gran rey contra el parecer de otros que mantienen la teoría inversa. Lo cierto es que los primeros años de su reinado se mostró amante de la justicia, mereciendo por ello elogios del XVI Concilio Toledano. La falta de documentos de la época no dan luz sobre la vida de Witiza, pues el más antiguo de ellos es el "Cronicón Moissiacense" que data de principios del siglo IX y que le acusa de lasciva al igual que el "Cronicón de Sebastián" y el de "Albeldense". Este último da más pormenores sobre determinados acontecimientos de su reinado, como por ejemplo, el asesinato del padre de Pelayo en Tuy ordenado por Witiza.

Un triente similar al presente se ilustra en Carles Tolrà lámina 22 nº 1021. La innovación de esta pieza y de las anteriores, no solo está en poner ambos bustos en el anverso, sino también el de colocar los nombres de las cecas en monograma y en el centro del campo, no en la leyenda como era habitual desde Leovigildo hasta Egica. También es una novedad la aparición del cetro o la santa cruz entre los bustos afrontados y de las primeras letras del anverso, abreviación de IN DOMINE DE.... En cuanto a la leyenda del reverso vemos lo que nos dice Florez: "estas últimas letras (RX RECS) se ven ahora por primera vez; y como están al lado del que sabemos fue admitido a consorcio en el Reyno, puede leerse, Regni Consoors, entendiéndose así, porque luego veremos la R y C solas, que aquí tienen otra letra, correspondiente a Regni Consors". Y más adelante: "Era pues locución usada entre los godos antes de Witiza y ahora adaptable a las cifras que tienen las mismas iniciales." Tomo III página 281.

Si observamos los dos bustos del anverso, vemos como la ceca de Emerita llega, en esta época, a una máxima simplicidad, casi abstracta, pues en ellos no se marcan ni la nariz, ni los ojos, ni la boca, y es gracias a las acuñadas en Narbona, Tarraco, Barcino, Gerunda y Cesaraugusta, que llegamos por asociación de ideas a la conclusión que tales trazos pretenden personificar dos bustos afrontados.

Ignoramos con qué fundamento la crónica del "Silense" habla de los numerosos crímenes de Witiza y de la destrucción de las murallas, como ya indicamos en otro apartado, pues la arqueología no ha conseguido hasta ahora confirmar dichos hechos. Tampoco está fundada la versión que quitara a Julián la silla de Toledo para dársela a Oppas, puesto que el primero murió reinando aún Egica. En el siglo XVIII, con Mayans se inicia una reacción, por parte de los historiadores, favorable al hijo de Egica, que continuará con la obra de Masdeu, de Fernández Guerra, Saavedra, etc. apoyándose en un anónimo latino casi contemporáneo a Witiza.

En la obra se Miles se indica que el busto de este triente debería corresponder al tipo 11b que aparece en el dibujo de la página 63. El presente es completamente distinto. Como por desgracia Miles no fotografía ninguna moneda de Witiza acuñada en Mentesa, no podemos saber si se trata de un error del dibujante. En el catálogo de Chaves, página 138 nº 369 se ilustra un triente de Mentesa, pero tampoco podemos compararlo con el presente, pues aquél está partido, quedando el busto incompleto. En las escasísimas fichas que poseemos de este monarca y esta ceca, el busto también es muy diferente. La tolerancia de Witiza hacia los judíos y su oposición a la injerencia de los obispos en el gobierno, le enemistó con el clero. Esta fue una de las causas por la que la opinión de la Historia será tan adversa a Witiza, aunque si es cierto que hacia el fin de su reinado hubo de reprimir varias conspiraciones promovidas por Teudfredo, duque de Córdoba, a quien hizo sacar los ojos. Posteriormente también debió hacer frente a Pelayo. Una vez disuelto el complot lo desterró a perpetuidad.

Como queda demostrado en la anterior y en la presente moneda, Witiza vuelve de nuevo a influenciarse en los trientes de Leovigildo, donde se coloca en el reverso la cruz sobre peldaños, y en anverso el busto de perfil. Desaparece la palabra PIVS para colocar PATRICIA, antiguo título dado por los romanos a Córdoba. Es interesante advertir que en esta ceca, Witiza no inicia la leyenda del anverso con la clásica cruz que vemos en las otras emisiones. El estilo del busto del anverso es similar al dibujado por Miles en página 56 nº 2bb.

La decadencia total se consumó cuando la nobleza visigoda acaudillada por los hijos de Witiza y por el arzobispo Oppas, vendió la tierra a los musulmanes, desertó en el Guadalete, y tras breve resistencia por parte de Theudomiro, se rindió al deshonroso pacto de Abdelazzir. Pero antes, para comprender dicha decadencia, debemos decir que el reino visigodo se debilitó por las numerosas revueltas que tuvo que afrontar Witiza contra los nobles comandados por Roderico, hijo de Teodofredo, de la estirpe de Chindasvinto, hecho que sin duda la aprovechó la expansión del Islam.

798 Triente. Anv.: $\ddot{\text{S}}\text{INDIHNVVITTI}\ddot{\text{S}}\text{AD}$ Busto de frente. Rev.: $\ddot{\text{S}}\text{BRACARAPIVS}$ Cruz sobre tres peldaños y con un anillo a ambos lados. 1,398 grs. Miles - . EBC-. RARÍSIMA. 22'000

Miles en página 496 nº 104 clasifica una falsificación de un triente de Witiza acuñada en Bracara y lo ilustra en su última lámina F con el nº 6. La misma moneda también la publica Chaves, página 165 nº 110, dentro del apartado de falsificaciones. Hasta la fecha de hoy, que presentamos este triente, no se conocía una pieza auténtica de Bracara bajo Witiza.

El busto es muy peculiar, no es similar a ninguno conocido. Una circunferencia limita el contorno de la cara; dentro un punto (nariz) sobre una media luna (boca). El pelo está representado por una semicircunferencia paralela a la cara, curvándose por sus extremos hasta formar dos pequeños aros. El busto lo forman dos líneas, que se abren a medida que descenden para finalizar cortadas por otra que las une. En el interior, dos nuevas líneas paralelas a aquellas y que descansan sobre la base.

A excepción de Emerita, no se conocían piezas de Witiza acuñadas en Lusitania y Gallaecia. Esta realidad aún realza más la rareza de dicho triente inédito, en el que vuelve a aparecer al final de la leyenda del reverso el epíteto PIVS, igual que en las emitidas por Witiza en Narbona, Gerunda, Tarraco, Mentesa, Reccopolis, Toletto, Ispali y Emerita, pero no en las de Cesaraugusta y Córdoba. Si bien, como ya indicamos en otros apartados, a partir de Egica nos encontramos con acuñaciones en baja ley y por lo tanto con gran aleación de plata, no ocurre así en la presente moneda, cuya coloración o tono desdice tal idea. La amonedación visigoda termina con Rodrigo (711), a pesar de continuar con el hijo de Witiza, Achila II en las cecas de Narbona, Gerunda y Tarraco (713). Es tanta la oscuridad que cubre el reinado de Witiza, que incluso no se sabe a ciencia cierta los hechos de su sucesión, pues según unos, entre ellos Saavedra, asoció al trono, antes de morir, a su hijo Achila, según otros, habría nombrado obispo de Sevilla a su hermano Oppas para que encabezara su descendencia.

Como el caso anterior, nos encontramos ante una pieza inédita de Egitania, acuñada bajo Witiza, desconocida en las bibliografías especializadas. El busto se asemeja al emitido en el taller monetario de Emerita, dibujado en Miles página 55 nº 2 I. o el ilustrado en Chaves página 139 nº 374. Dicha semblanza no nos debe extrañar, pues Egitania está aproximadamente a unos 180 kilómetros de Emerita, ambas en la Lusitania. De fuerte personalidad, destaca por encima de todo el yelmo redondeado en su parte alta, así como la mandíbula prominente. El pelo metamorfeado en dos líneas paralelas, parece volar al viento. Y a pesar de que la realización del busto sea tan naïf como todos los trientes visigodos, apreciamos en éste un carácter asombrosamente intimidatorio, haciendo buena la teoría de aquellos historiadores que proclaman a Witiza como un rey cruel y lujurioso.

Dos de sus hijos Sisebuto y Ebas, parece ser que fueron los intermediarios de Julian (pariente de Witiza, posiblemente se trató de Olban o Urban) en las negociaciones con Tarik. Negociaciones que abrieron las puertas de España a los musulmanes, aunque no era ésta la intención, ya que ellos buscaban un apoyo para derrocar a Rodrigo. Lo único cierto es que facilitaron el camino del al-Andalus a los invasores a cambio de conservar Olban el gobierno de Ceuta.
